Learning from a master

■ Robert Haines explains the intricacies of chess to willing students of all ages at the Albany Library

By Matt Petersen
STAFF WRITER

Nestled in a room just off of the children's fiction stacks in the Edith Stone room of the Albany Library, around 20 serious athletes are steeped in strategy on a Tuesday evening.

The group, ranging in age anywhere from 8 years to middle-age, are all equals on this day. Their instructor, international master Robert Haines, calmly reenacts past moves, how to firmly attack weaknesses, how to gain critical position as well as the ever-so-intricate Sicilian Defense, which draws "Ooh's," and "Aah's" from his crew of studious followers. The sport of the evening is chess, and make no bones, it is a sport.

"A lot of people think of chess as just a game, but the rest of the world regards it as a sport," says the 48-year-old Haines who has been a professional chess instructor for 30 years now. "You can burn more calories in a regular game of chess than two heavyweights (boxers) would in a 15-round fight."

Haines is a chess instructor who gets paid for his work, but every Tuesday he volunteers his time from 6-8 p.m. to anyone who wants to listen. On this night, there are mostly youngsters filling the room who sit transfixed to the instruction like a young television junkie watching cartoons. They can't get enough.

Haines was contacted by library staff last year when it heard about his previous free seminars that he held throughout the city. He began teaching at the former Cafe Crayon around eight years ago, then moved to the Burger Depot on Solano. In January he moved his crew over to the library, where the Albany Library Chess Workshop was formed.

The club started out with five or six initial players in the first few weeks and has grown tremendously, according to librarian Julie Winkelstein. The club has outgrown three rooms in its brief stint at the library.

"It's just amazing to see that many kids so involved," Winkelstein says. "Chess is very important to (Haines) and he loves giving it back to the kids."

Playing chess and considering strategy May 29 at the Albany Library are Keith Moffat, 10 from Berkeley, right, in a finger-biting game against Nick Tapia, 12, from Berkeley. Sitting next to Nick (center) is a frustrated Ryan Dooley, 12, from El Cerrito.

Every week for the first hour, Haines goes over strategy and various opening moves for his students in a classroom setting on a vinyl replicate chess board that hangs from a wall. They discuss what the "masters" would do and have done in tournaments in the past. Haines shows one particular move made by a Grand Master in a recent tournament, and it brings a groan of disapproval over the crowd.

Youth baseball league parents trade charges

■ Team unfairly characterized say parents of Pinto League Lions

By J.R. Deaton

EL CERRITO — The little kids are all right; it's the adults who may soon need some of those new high blood pressure medications.

Charges of cheating and racial bias were heard at the El Cerrito Youth Baseball board of directors meeting last week. Nearly 30 Pinto League parents attended the meeting and many voiced their concerns about tensions in the league. Pinto League players are 7 and 8 years old. El Cerrito Youth Baseball is a private nonprofit organization of about 430 players ages 7 to 18.

Towards the end of the sometimes heated discussion last week, Pinto League president Lance Kolding said he was resigning his position and left the meeting. Kolding later said he did not want to quit, but did so because he did not want his presence at league games to be a distraction.

The immediate precipitating event was a June 2 game between a predominately minority team, the Lions, and another Pinto league team, the Eagles. The Lions were accused of not rotating all their players into play as league rules stipulate and the Eagles' manager filed a protest. The league has also received written complaints of misconduct by Lions' coaches and verbal complaints of misconduct on the Eagles' side.

At last week's board meeting Lions' parents complained that

Police chief selection going to Albany voters

By Kate Darby Rauch

ALBANY — Voters will decide in November whether the city's police chief should be appointed by the City Council or chosen by the electorate.

The City Council voted unanimously last week to accept a recommendation by the Charter Review Commission to ask residents which path the city should take to find a new chief.

Current Police Chief Larry Murdo, 53, has held the elective post since 1986.

City officials began looking into switching to an appointment system after Murdo announced earlier this year that he plans to retire when his term ends in late November.

Albany is one of two cities in the state to elect rather then appoint its chief. The other is Santa Clara.

Switching to an appointment system requires changing the city charter, which must be approved by voters.

"By putting it on the ballot I think we're going to get a true picture of what our citizens want," said Councilwoman Jewel Okawachi.

El Cerrito budget keeps cash in reserve

■ The city manager is recommending gradually reactivating the Redevelopment Agency

By J.R. Deaton
STAFF WRITER

EL CERRITO — The City Council looked to the future as members reached consensus during a study session last week on a $16 million budget for fiscal 2001-02 that should receive final approval on Monday. The budget would keep $2 million in reserve that at least one council member would like the city to consider using toward a future civic center project.

As always, police services and fire protection account for the lion's share of general fund expenditures in the budget. The two departments total to $9.3 million. Community development general fund expenditures are budgeted at $2.9 million; recreation at $2.2 million and city administration at $1.6 million.

The council spent several evenings reviewing the proposed budget since it was introduced by City Manger Scott Hanin on May 29. The format of the budget document was praised by council members and members of the public for being more user-friendly and readable than past budgets.

Total expenditures are budgeted at $16.2 million and revenues at $ 16.3 million.

Major revenue sources include property taxes, about $3.2 million; real property transfer tax, $850,000; sales taxes, $2.5 million; utility users tax, $2.5 million; and community service revenue of $1.3 million. The city's unrestricted reserves are projected to be more than $4.2 million or about 26 percent of the general fund at the end of the current fiscal year.

During his presentation of the budget Hanin noted that the Redevelopment Agency has paid off its debt to the city and said it should shed its inactive status. "We need to do that in small steps, and in organized and focused steps, but we think it's time the agency start doing something," Hanin said.

The budget includes the new staff positions of city engineer/public works manager, information systems coordinator, assistant to the city manager and building inspector. As proposed these new positions would not require extra expenditures because of reduced spending on outside consultants the city now uses and savings in other budget areas.

"Three of the four positions are positions currently funded by consultants," Hanin said. "My philosophy is we shouldn't have consultants doing staff work. The fourth position is the downgrade of what used to be the community and administrative services director to an assistant city manager position."

Community Development Director Jill Keimach pointed out that the council reached consensus on several budget matters including the conclusion that the capital improvement budget should be amended to fully fund the library improvement project.

Also $600,000 in undesignated reserves will provide $100,000 for the Contra Costa Civic Theater, $250,000 for a new city financial management system and $250,000 for a fall clean-up program.

The council also wanted the Measure A section 10 fund accounted for separately, which will be done next year. Additionally, $2 million will be moved from undesignated reserves to the capital facilities maintenance fund.

"Staff will review the current street maintenance, infrastructure and handicap access ramp funding allocations and return to the City Council with recommendations for future funding amounts by the end of September (2001)," Keimach said.

EL CERRITO CHAMBER

Chamber president lauded by fair officials

El Cerrito Chamber President Marge Collins was lauded recently for her "tireless and enthusiastic work to make our community better in many ways."

The praise came from Fire Chief Mark Scott and former City Manager Gary Pokorny, leaders of the organizing group for this year's El Cerrito Rotary Club's July 4 Community Fair.

In their letter requesting the Chamber's participation as a supporter of the 2001 community celebration, Collins was cited for her service "on the Chamber and Civic Theater boards." Last year, the two Rotarians added, the Chamber's support helped make El Cerrito's July 4 Fair possible.

"When the day was over," the pair reported, "we were able to support Project Reach, an after-school enrichment program for approximately 25 at-risk third, fourth, and fifth grade students at all of the El Cerrito public elementary schools.

"With the cooperation of the El Cerrito Rotary Club, the Rotary International Foundation, the West County Public Education Fund, the City of El Cerrito Recreation Division and your support, we are making a real difference in the lives of these 25 children and their families.

"This summer, with the additional partnership of the East Bay Regional Parks Foundation, these same children will be able to experience, for the first time for many of them, a week long camping experience in the East Bay Parks as a result of their participation in Project Reach."

The pair went on to report that a specific project for proceeds from the 2001 July 4 Fair has not as yet been selected. When it is selected, they added, "we can assure you that it will be equally worthwhile for our community."

New member

Those who want to play it safe when purchasing electronic equipment will enjoy doing business with Radio Shack, the newest Chamber member.

According to Robert Johnson, manager of the local Radio Shack outlet at 11299-L San Pablo Ave. in Del Norte Plaza under the store's Product Guarantee Program, customers have 30 days to decide whether or not they're pleased with their purchase. If they aren't, the store will exchange the merchandise or offer a full refund.

Johnson, who was manager and area supervisor for a fast food chain before taking over as head of Radio Shack in El Cerrito last August, points out his store offers a full range of electronic gear : all the way from cellular phones to direct TV, television sets, radios, calculators, games and toys.

The local Radio Shack outlet is open every day of the year with the exception of Christmas and New Year's.

Six more reinvest

During the past three weeks six more members have reinvested in the El Cerrito Chamber: Best Inn, Mira Vista Golf and Country Club, Abbey Pet Hospital, Abbey Carpet, Wells Fargo Bank and Taco Bell.

Lunch deadline nears

Members of the El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce and their guests have just one week to make reservations for the organization's final business luncheon of the Spring season.

The session, which will be held at the Mira Vista Golf and Country Club at noon Tuesday, June 26, will feature local investment advisor Robert Berend

EL CERRITO — On June 7 at 10:25 a.m. police arrived at the scene of a multiple injury collision at the intersection of Carlson Boulevard and Central Avenue. A mother and her 9-year-old daughter were riding a motorcycle that collided with a 30-foot refrigerated delivery truck. The details of the collision are under investigation by the ECPD major accident investigation team, but police report that the truck driver, a 39-year-old Hayward man was arrested for felony driving while intoxicated. The woman operating the motorcycle sustained major injuries and was transported to John Muir Trauma Center in Walnut Creek. Her condition is listed as critical. The daughter lost part of her right leg in the collision. The girl and appendage were transported to Children's Hospital Oakland. Her condition is listed as serious. The driver of the truck was not injured in the collision.

■ On June 8 at 8:45 p.m. police responded to a report of spousal battery that occurred at the Eagle's Hall on Carlson Boulevard. A 46-year-old San Pablo man was soon arrested for "corporal injury to a co-inhabitant" and taken to county jail. The suspect had pushed and shoved his spouse causing minor injuries during a domestic dispute.

■ A report of attempted shoplifting was received by police on June 7 at 6 p.m. A 37-year-old Richmond man had been detained by Target Store security officers after he had reportedly tried to steal items valued at more than $400 from the store. The suspect was arrested for grand theft and theft with prior convictions and transported to county jail in Martinez.

■ An officer of the ECPD responded to reports of a physical altercation at a Walnut Street home on June 7 at 7:05 p.m. The investigation revealed that during a family dispute a 76-year-old El Cerrito man was struck in the head by his grandson. The blow resulted in minor injuries, the police reported. The grandson, a 45-year-old El Cerrito resident, was arrested for elder abuse (battery) and taken by police to county jail.

■ On June 6 at noon police responded to a report of a disturbance at a business in the 10700 block of San Pablo Avenue. Officers soon discovered that a former employee was "making threats and demanding money" from the former employer. The former employee, a 21-year-old Oakland man, was arrested for attempted strong-arm robbery and terrorist threats. The suspect was transported to county jail in Martinez.

■ At about 1:40 in the afternoon of June 5 detectives of the ECPD served a felony arrest warrant on a 53-year-old El Cerrito man. While serving the warrant, police located "a small amount of suspected heroin and several hypodermic syringes" in the man's possession. The man was arrested for the felony warrant, possession of controlled substance and possession of hypodermic syringes and taken to county jail.

■ A lottery theft was reported May 26 at 8:51 p.m. at a San Pablo Avenue liquor store. An unknown man entered the store grabbed the lottery dispenser with lottery tickets and fled the scene. The suspect is described as a white male about 30 years- old, weighing about 180 pounds, with tattoos on his neck and left forearm. The property loss is estimated at $3,854.

■ On the evening of May 15 a man tried to steal a bottle of whiskey from the Albertson's store on San Pablo Avenue. The suspect, a 49-year-old Richmond resident concealed the bottle of booze in his bag and walked out of the store. Store security stopped the man and police were summoned.

■ About 2:30 in the afternoon of May 15 a Kearney Street resident reported an act of vandalism. Some unknown person or persons had, for some unknown reason, shot the window of the man's house with a BB or pellet gun. Cost to replace the window was estimated at $1,000.

■ Sometime between the hours of 8:15 a.m. and 9:10 p.m. on May 14 a Carol Court home was robbed. Person or persons unknown ransacked the residence and made off with more than $7,000 worth of property.

■ On May 14 an El Cerrito woman reported that someone had used her credit card number to purchase more than $1,620 worth of items via the Internet and phone orders. Police have two suspects.

■ On Cypress Avenue near South 53rd Street on the evening of May 13 a 38-year-old man reportedly struck a 36-year-old woman four times with his closed fist. The charge is listed as "simple battery" "with hands." The police reports states "the couple has a child together" and that the man was a "parolee at large." According to the report the woman did not receive any visible injuries as a result of the incident.

■ On May 11 about 4:30 a man reported that someone had entered his unlocked vehicle, which was parked on Carquinez Avenue in El Cerrito, and removed a wallet. Another petty theft was reported May 11 at 5:13 p.m. On Colusa Avenue an unknown person entered an unlocked vehicle and made off with a purse.

as guest speaker. His talk will cover small business retirement planning, new stretch IRA sales, 401(k) plans, and the future of the stock market.

Reservations for this event are required and may be made at 510-233-7040 on or before the close of business on Friday, June 22.

There will be no business luncheons during both July and August. The series will resume in September. Meanwhile, the Chamber office at 10848 San Pablo Ave. will be open to serve the public Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

Chamber wins praise

The El Cerrito Chamber has won praise for the part it played in helping stage the Sister Cities Parade and Multicultural Festival held here in early June.

The event was organized by the group Celebrating Culture and Community, an associate member of the Chamber.

CC&C President Eve A. Ma in a letter to the Chamber, termed the Sister Cities event a "success."

"And that success would not have been possible without your volunteering," Ma added.

She went on to report the parade groups were local community organizations that were really representative of the ethnic and cultural diversity we have in this area. Festival performers were of high quality and gave good demonstrations of the music, dance and martial arts traditions of some of our communities.

"It would have been completely impossible," Ma wrote the Chamber, "for us to have presented this huge event without your help. You, along with the other volunteers, are the backbone of the Sister Cities event and allow us to provide the general public with a good time while helping us all to enjoy and learn more about our ethnic and cultural diversity."

Summer camp to open

"Summer Camp 2001," a day-camp for kindergarten through second grade students sponsored by Nomura School's Pacific Academy, gets underway next Monday.

The school, a Chamber member, announced that registration forms for the 8-week summer camp runs through Aug. 10 may be obtained by telephoning 510-528-1727.

The Pacific Academy is still accepting applications for the 2001-02 academic year. Those interested may call 510-262-2600 for information.

Civic groups seek city co-sponsorship

EL CERRITO — Recreation Director Monica Kortz reported last week that thus far four organizations have renewed or applied for city co-sponsorship. Last March the City Council approved a process for community organizations to apply for co-sponsorship. Prior to all the applications being forwarded to the council, Kortz outlined "specific areas of interest" for review:

— The El Cerrito Art Association currently receives a reduced rate to use the Community Center as permitted by co-sponsorship. "The group has requested free or reduced fees for facilities and staff time at the Community Center," Kortz said.

— The El Cerrito Garden Club also receives the reduced rate to use the Community and would like to continue to do so.

— El Cerrito Historical Society currently uses the Senior Center at the co- sponsored reduced rate and would like to continue.

— The El Cerrito Tennis Club uses the city's tennis courts at a reduced rate. The club has requested a $280 grant amount for the use of the Arlington Clubhouse for general meetings and tournament activities, Kortz reported.

IN BRIEF

Entries open for annual Junk Art Show

The 10th annual Junk Art Show, sponsored by the El Cerrito Recycling Center, will be on display at the July 4 Fair at the Community Center, 7007 Moeser Lane, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Artists of all ages and skill levels are invited to participate.

"Junk Art" is artwork created from junk or other materials that otherwise would have been recycled or thrown in the trash. Entrants should have fun and be creative.

There will be a prize drawing for gift certificates to Amsterdam Art and the East Bay Depot for Creative Reuse and only Junk Art Show participants are eligible for the drawing.

EPA funds West County Environmental Resource Library

The Federal Environmental Protection Agency announced it will fund a $30,000 project to help develop an Environmental Resource Library for West Contra Costa County. The goal of the effort is to draw upon the wealth of existing environmental education materials and make them more accessible to teachers and the general public. The project was proposed by the West Contra Costa Waste Authority, the public agency responsible for helping West County reduce the amount of solid waste disposed in landfills.

The West County project was ranked number one out of over 60 applications submitted from across the United States. In addition to developing a resource library, the project will also provide workshops to local teachers to educate and expose them to a variety of environmental issues and help them develop skills to incorporate environmental education into their classrooms.

This project is just one of a number of state and federal grant-funded projects that have been obtained by the waste authority in the past few years. Other recent projects include state funding of over $500,000 to build the region's household hazardous waste drop-off facility and funding for curbside collection of used motor oil. While the total project costs for the Environmental Resource Library are only $30,000, the agency intends to use the existing library infrastructure to leverage the funding and make information available to as many teachers and students as possible to this information.

The Waste Authority will assemble the environmental resource materials over the summer and begin holding workshops with West County teachers in the fall. Interested members of the public and local teachers can call 510-215-3125 if they are interested in participating in the project.

Governor's Reading Award winners

Madera and Harding elementary schools in El Cerrito are among 800 California public schools in 54 counties that will receive awards the Governor's Reading Award Program established by Gov. Gray Davis.

Funding of $4 million for the Reading Award Program was established with the passage of legislation in 1999 as an incentive for students in grades K-8 to read. In the second year of this program students from participating schools read a total of 1,081,276,410 pages during the six-month timeframe. This is an increase of 391,811,123 pages over the previous year.

Each winning school will form a committee of teachers, school staff, site council members, program coordinators, parents and students to determine how the grant will best benefit the school and its students.

Students at Harding Elementary read books totaling 664,011 pages during the months designated for the program. Students at Madera Elementary read 1,468,409 pages.

Students at John Muir Elementary in Berkeley also won an award for reading 275,462 pages.

St. Jerome's students raise ALS funds

Fifth graders at St. Jerome School in El Cerrito, with the help of the school community, raised $500 to aid families and patients with the nerve disease ALS (see Martin Snapp's column, page A9, for related information on the disease). This disease claimed the life of fifth grade teacher's husband in 1999. Students held a nacho sale and raffle to help raise the money.

Board has misplaced priorities regarding teachers

These are comments made by former school board member Gerald J. Brunetti to Albany teachers at their June 1 rally:

I am honored to join you on this special day and to have the privilege to speak to you.

As a former school board member — twice its president — I took great pride in being able to work with Albany teachers, administrators, and community members to ensure that we always offered the finest possible education for our students. I have also taken pride in being an ex-school board member, associated with a group that over the years has demonstrated a commitment to high-quality education. I no longer feel the same pride; and this has to do with the actions — or more precisely, the inactions — of the present school board on the issue of teacher compensation.

It was not always easy being a school board member, facing conflicting demands and expectations from various constituencies; but I like to think that the boards I served on always insisted first and foremost on the educational welfare of their students, and this meant fundamentally supporting teachers in their work. I am afraid that the present board has misplaced its priorities: it does not seem to realize that inadequately supported teachers — teachers who have been repeatedly distracted from their work, underpaid, insulted, disrespected cannot easily do the job they expect themselves to do. At the very least, the present board is guilty of poorly managing its resources and of not recognizing the fact that "program is teachers" and "teachers are program." I do hope and pray that the board will come to its senses before it is too late; I hope that they will not wake up and find that they have destroyed the essential fabric of trust between community and school — between parent and teacher and child — that makes public education work.

I have been a teacher for more than 35 years, most of these as a teacher educator. I have just completed a research study that has taken me into high schools, where I have interviewed experienced teachers on their motivations for remaining in the classrooms for 15, 20, 30 years and more. Despite my long experience working with teachers, I was surprised to find the extent to which the teachers I interviewed were motivated primarily by professional factors — by their strong commitment to students and desire to help them learn and grow, by their wish to do something important for society, by the excitement they felt in their day-to-day work in the classroom. I was deeply moved by these interviews. This is the kind of teachers that you are — men and women, many of you long-term practitioners, profoundly dedicated to your work and to the students that you serve. You are the kind of professionals that wise communities seek for their schools. I stand in awe of you and the noble, courageous stand you are taking. What you are doing goes far beyond the pittance in raises that you will ultimately get, however generous they turn out to be. What you are doing is insisting that teachers be respected for the essential work they do for this community and beyond and for their unwavering dedication to the welfare of the students they teach. I support you 100 percent in your cause. You are making a profound contribution to our profession.

Another look at the View Ordinance debate

By Glenn and Donna Davis

In response to Pam Gilbert-Snyder ("Suspend and Revise El Cerrito View Ordinance") in the Opinion section of the June 1 Journal:

It is sad that in Pam's mind, El Cerritans are divided into two warring classes: "view claimants" — who despise trees and want to chop them down and "tree owners" — who cherish trees and are compelled to protect them. Life is rarely that simple. Many "view claimants" are also "tree owners," like myself for example. I enjoy my view while working with my uphill neighbors to assure that my trees do not impede their views. So I worry when someone attempts to pit neighbors against each other. They usually have an undisclosed agenda. Ultimately, this whole issue is not about views anyway. It's not about trees. It's about people who should be able to resolve neighborly issues without rancor and viciousness. Only when all other options fail do neighbors resort to the long-established view ordinance.

Pam doesn't realize that each city has certain "things" that draw people to it; things beyond "health, welfare and safety." In El Cerrito, it is the small town atmosphere, the cool breezes, the trees, the reasonably priced homes (disappearing fast) and yes, the views. Her analysis of the El Cerrito View Ordinance is completely wrong. Its purpose is to maintain the existing and unique views afforded by this city alone, not to rubber-stamp the arbitrary chopping down of trees at the whim of "view claimants." Despite being informed of that by city officials, Mrs. Gilbert-Snyder simply can't comprehend, and is now attempting to turn us against each other. Certainly she has a right to free speech. However, is something else going on here? El Cerritans, be not deceived. This is not the voice of one brave individual beating the drum of fairness for the masses. This, is purely personal.

City officials have apparently attempted to explain to Pam the reasons for and the value of its well-established tree ordinance. However, Mrs.

ACS gives thanks in Relay for Life

On the weekend of June 2nd and 3rd, the El Cerrito High School football field was the site of an enthusiastic and fun-filled event for the American Cancer Society, called Relay For Life. Relay For Life is about a community that takes up the fight against cancer: by raising money for the American Cancer Society goals and providing cancer prevention information, we hope to decrease cancer mortality by 50 percent; decrease incidence of cancer by 25 percent; and significantly improve the lives of all those living with cancer. In 2001-2002, over 3,000 communities across the U.S will host this event.

For 24 hours, it was a time of laughter and tears, a time with old friends and new friends, and a time to cherish each other, as well as cherish those people who have passed away from cancer.

We were proud of our survivors who led us in the initial lap, for their personal courage; and we thank them for their support of this event.

The Relay For Life committee wants to extend it thanks to Principal Mike Arronian, Vice Prinicpal Edwyna Elzie, and ECHS staff who facilitated the use of their facilities; the many local merchants who donated food or prizes for the event; local physicians and realtors who helped to underwrite some of the costs of the event; entertainers who kept the crowd entertained for free; UC students who set up and broke down the event, or provided nutritional advice at the Cancer Control booth; high school students for their good will and good spirit; volunteers who ran the booths; busy service clubs who made the time to form teams; the El Cerrito City Council and Albany City Council teams who waged a friendly competition against each other; and teams of families and friends who walked the track, day and night, for 24 hours, because there is no finish until there is a cure.

The committee would also like to thank the neighbors who live around the El Cerrito High School field, for their good wishes and patience with this event.

As of 10:00 a.m. Sunday morning, our Relay For Life had raised over $19,000. Money is continuing to come in. If you would like to make a donation in support of our Relay For Life, please contact Cynthia Shane-Smith, staff partner, at (925) 934-7640 or Janice Jordan, local chairperson, at 525-2608.

If you would like to know more information about cancer, or about this event, please call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit the website for the American Cancer Society at www.cancer.org.

Mill and Lumber proposal good for city

The proposed Mill and Lumber project is good for El Cerrito and should be approved by the City Council on June 25.

The project includes commercial space on San Pablo Avenue, live/work (office) space, and housing on a primarily residential side street. It is entirely in character with the surrounding neighborhood and El Cerrito in general.

Project critics demand more offices, but housing is essential to the area's revitalization. The new residents will eat at local restaurants and shop at local stores, thus invigorating our economy.

This privately financed project, with no public subsidy, will bring hundreds of thousands in new tax dollars to the community. Furthermore, the project includes 24 units of housing affordable to teachers, firefighters, police officers, and fixed-income seniors.

Private developers believe that investing money in additional offices at the Mill and Lumber site is uneconomical and an unacceptable financial risk. Yet, in their opposition to housing, the critics propose that the public subsidize more offices. This is foolish. Let's spend our scarce economic development dollars on sites that need help.

The Mill and Lumber site already has a developer who neither needs nor requests a public subsidy. In their zeal, the critics suggest that our Redevelopment Agency build offices in partnership with the developer and share in the profits. This idea is not only foolish but dangerous. Unlike other uses of redevelopment funding, this suggestion would put our government in direct day-to-day competition with other landlords and businesses in the community. This is not the proper role for government.

This well-designed mixed-use project requires no public subsidy and will enhance the community, yet it is threatened by an orchestrated campaign of opposition. All those who favor this project should make their views known at the City Council meeting on June 25. Inform council members that their votes on this project will factor heavily when you cast your ballot in the Council election on November 6.

Condos, offices and retail better for site

I am disappointed in the plans being currently debated for an apartment complex to be built on the El Cerrito Mill and Lumber site.

Rental units at this location will attract a large percentage of students from Berkeley, as well as workers from Oakland and San Francisco. These tenants would probably be relatively short-term. Their shopping and restaurant patronage would be elsewhere and their participation in local affairs would be minimal.

El Cerrito would benefit far more from owner-occupied dwellings such as townhouses or condominiums. There is a strong demand for that kind of housing and buyers should not be hard to find.

I also believe this section of San Pablo Avenue cries out for an abundance of quality retail and office space at street level, to encourage foot traffic and a sense of community. A wall of four-story-high apartments will only increase the feeling that this stretch of San Pablo Avenue is a "no-man's land." El Cerrito desperately needs pedestrian-friendly shopping, attractive dining establishments and pleasant landscaping.

I hope the El Cerrito Planning Commission and our City Council members will consider carefully the long-range effects on the city of any development of this strategically located property.

Devoting too much opinion space

I applaud the Journal's progressive editorial policy on the vital issues affecting the health and welfare of all members of the local, state, federal and international communities, regardless of race or religion.

At the same time, I am perplexed by the priority you give the wild, opinionated half-truths pedaled by Peter Loubal.

Obviously he despises taxes, attacks the mayor, the City Council majority and the outstanding administrative staff at all costs. He aims his barbs at the employees union, decent wages and fringe benefits.

Besides, he is longwinded and boring. His reasoning is circular. Lincoln Steffins he ain't.

Energy solution is within public's reach

Dr. Daniel Berman, PUC Consumer Advocate, and John T. O'Connor, founder of the National Toxics Campaign, co-authored the book "Who Owns the Sun?" On page 44 they say:

"...renewable-energy insurgencies of the last two decades have proved several hypotheses:

"1) Grassroots citizen-activists, if adequately informed and infuriated, could shut down multibillion-dollar energy projects, especially nuclear power plants.

"2) Strict government energy standards for buildings, cars, and appliances

Project will set a high standard for future proposals

By Kevin Stong

As a Design Review Board member I along with my fellow board members voted to endorse the mixed-use project presently proposed for the El Cerrito Mill and Lumber site. The JMS project is exceptional both in its design sophistication and in the responsiveness of the developers to DRB concerns.

Many housing projects in recent years have been developed with their backs to the street. What is seen are garage doors, long walls and fences, and dense landscaping that pose security problems. Absent are eyes on the street and a street-orientation that is neighborhood-friendly. Rose Park on the east side of Richmond Street just south of Schmidt, and Civic Center Plaza on Manila near City Hall are two nearby examples of such housing complexes. In contrast the JMS design has plentiful windows and a handsome streetside presence that will upgrade the local neighborhood character.

The DRB feels that El Cerrito should discourage developments that are built as monotonous complexes — monochromatic and repetitive sets of buildings. Buildings through variations in color and architecture should have individual character. This is in keeping with the diverse character of a townscape as opposed to faceless sprawl. The JMS developers have been responsive to this concern by providing significant and attractive variations in building architecture and colors. The architectural design is exceptional and will be a pleasure to walk by.

The DRB asked that the San Pablo Avenue side have a distinctive architectural identity to distinguish it in use and form from the rest of the project. The retail and livework spaces that JMS is incorporating into the project are a first step towards developing a mixed-use townscape for the center of town. The depth of the Mill and Lumber site makes it better suited for residential than other shallower properties along the avenue. Nevertheless the San Pablo Avenue side of the project will be commercial in character helping to catalyze office and retail development elsewhere.

The DRB suggested tower elements on the corners on San Pablo Avenue to serve as landmarks much as the tower element on Market Hall in Rockridge makes that a popular landmark. Since clock towers and church steeples give towns identity without significantly blocking light or views, we felt the towers would enhance El Cerrito's image. JMS responded to our request by adding attractive towers to the commercial side of the project. The DRB being sensitive to the blighting effect of parking lots, advocated that parking be visually screened from San Pablo Avenue. JMS, having already hidden most of the parking behind architecture, further screened the remaining visible parking with an attractive wall. Signage will direct motorists to the parking entrance.

The original proposal had shops recessed under an arcade supported with large piers. Although interesting architecturally, the DRB feels that the commercial success of these storefronts requires unobstructed visibility to passing traffic on San Pablo Avenue. Display windows at the sidewalk edge should also be close to passing pedestrians. The developer responded by doing away with the arcades and moving the shops up to the sidewalk edge. Opportunities for development of this caliber do not come to cities like El Cerrito often. I hope the El Cerrito City Council will vote to endorse the project and so set a high standard for future development in El Cerrito.

Mill and Lumber proposal complies with General Plan

By Steve Price

The El Cerrito Planning Commission voted against the mixed-use project being proposed by JMS Developers for the El Cerrito Mill and Lumber site on San Pablo Avenue. The commission majority said it is incompatible with the General Plan. As an ex-planning commissioner who actively participated in the rewrite of the General Plan, I find this puzzling. The present proposal is very in line with the General Plan. Two of the present Planning Commissioners also participated in the General Plan rewrite. As the minority opinion, they were the commissioners who voted in support of the project.

The language of the General Plan clearly supports this type of development: "Landmarks, distinctive architecture, crosswalks, and unique commercial and public activity areas are lacking [along San Pablo Avenue]. San Pablo Avenue could benefit from a conscious strategy to create distinct nodes of higher density and activity with public space and pedestrian amenities."

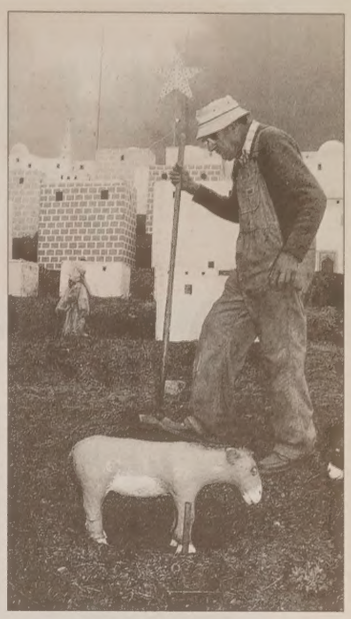

General Plan policy supports development that has enough physical presence to positively affect neighborhood character. "Corner sites provide opportunities for landmark building elements to be incorporated into the building design and site layout. Landmark elements may include towers, unique roof shapes, unique facade treatments, and taller buildings at the corners and at major building entries that help to visually identify the area from San Pablo Avenue."

Commissioners claimed that the JMS proposal is too tall. At its tallest along San Pablo Avenue, it is essentially three stories. There are three distinct stories and a roof with dormers. The fact there are small loft spaces behind the dormers technically makes the project four stories. But take away the dormers, it is three stories and no different in height. My "Dictionary of Architecture" by Francis Ching (Van Nostrand Reinhold) defines three-story buildings as low rise architecture. This project fulfills General Plan policy at a conservative scale.

Commissioners claimed that the proposal is not in harmony with the surrounding neighborhood. It is true that the General Plan encourages "compatibility among neighboring land uses." But in this case the surrounding character and uses include ugly strip retail, a check cashing store, the City Hall portables, the DMV, non-descript apartment buildings and rusty sheet metal warehouses. This is not the kind of environment that the General Plan was intended to preserve, nor can I believe the Planning Commission wishes to preserve.

JMS has in good faith designed its project to conform to numerous General Plan policies. We need to be conscientious in invoking the General Plan or quality developers like JMS will quit El Cerrito in frustration. How then can El Cerrito hope for a better future?

Happy Birthday, Sundar Shadi!

This week is the 101st birthday of Mr. Shadi. We all remember with pride and appreciation the seasonal displays he erected on his lot on Arlington Boulevard, particularly at Christmas time. His Christmas season display was popular throughout the East Bay, and won national awards. These displays were the delight of children from 1950 through 1997.

The Shadi family has agreed to donate the figures for the Christmas display to the community, under the leadership of Soroptimist. With the help of our Professional Firefighters Association, the figures have been moved to storage donated by Jack Freethy.

Now it's time for us to give something back, to honor Mr. Shadi for his work, and to help preserve this display. Money is needed to clean and repair the figures, for insurance, for set-up and maintenance.

Please send your donations, earmarked for Mr. Shadi's display, to: Soroptimist International of El Cerrito, P.O. Box 324, El Cerrito CA 94530.

Any amount will help, but those who can might send $101 to mark Mr. Shadi's 101st year. If you can volunteer your time and talents, please write to the same address.

Happy birthday, Mr. Shadi!

Thank you,

could save massive amounts of energy and create hundreds of thousands of jobs. According to the head of the California Energy Commission, the largest sources of electricity savings in California have been new state building-code standards and state appliance-efficiency standards, which saved electricity equivalent to the production of seven large power plants between 1997 and 1990, despite a 20-percent increase in population.

"3) Low energy prices and deregulation stifle alternatives. As long as oil, gas, and coal supplies and services flow smoothly, and prices at the pump and meter remain more or less stable, the public at large has been content to leave ownership and control of energy to its customary masters in New York, Houston, Kuwait, and Saudi Arabia — threats of global warming, pollution, and transportation gridlock notwithstanding."

Gilbert-Snyder's take on the matter is, "if the law doesn't benefit me, then suspend and revise the law." What she conveniently forgot to mention, in her long epistle to neighborly interaction, is that she and her husband Paul were respectfully asked by me, her uphill neighbor, to begin a discussion regarding two trees on her property. My initial letter to her and her response have been placed on my own Web site at www.hometown.aol.com/cosmic564/index.html for all to read. So much for truth, flexibility, friendliness or even common courtesy. Beware, El Cerritans, beware.

Many other Bay Area cities have recognized the importance of views to their economy and the aesthetics of their communities and have adopted view ordinances to protect that valuable asset. In fact, El Cerrito's view ordinance is based upon the successful view ordinance enacted in Tiburon many years ago. But Pam simply will not accept what has worked for this city and others for many, many years. Is Pam Gilbert-Snyder smarter than the rest of the world? I don't think so.

The City Council is wise to keep its tree ordinance in place as is and to eschew Pam Gilbert-Snyder's desperate ego trip.

Signup open for Redway youth summer camp

EL CERRITO — The city is sponsoring a resident camp this summer from July 2 to July 7 at Camp Ravencliff in Humboldt County for children ages 8 to 14. Located in Redway on the Eel River in Humboldt County, Ravencliff has served the community for over 65 years as the YMCA of the East Bay's resident camp. It is a simple, rustic camp that accommodates up to 90 campers in 10 cabins. Activities include swimming, canoeing, hiking, nature study, archery, basketball, camp fires, field games, stargazing, and more.

There is a fully stocked Arts & Crafts Cabin and the Main Lodge has plenty of room for inside activities including pool, foosball, ping-pong, and board games.

Registration packets are available at the Community Center, 7007 Moeser Lane, scholarships are available. For more information, check the City of El Cerrito's Web site, www.ci.el-cerrito.ca.us, or call 510-215-4370.

Chief

voters four times since 1952. Each time, voters have rejected attempts to switch to an appointment system.

This time may be different, supporters of the change say.

They say there has always been a chief in office interested in keeping his job, making the vote seem like a personal judgment of that person.

This time, the position will be open, and so far no one has expressed an interest in running for the job.

"It seems like we're given a true opportunity to look at it afresh," said Councilman Jon Ely. "This isn't about personalities, it's about an issue."

Opponents of an appointment system say that electing the chief is an affirmation of democracy, because it gives power to the people. Albany has been well served by an elected chief, they say.

Supporters say changing to an appointment process would widen the candidate pool by allowing the city to pick the best qualified candidate.

This is particularly true, they say, because the pool for eligible candidates is slim.

To qualify, candidates for police chief must live in Albany, have a master's degree and extensive supervisory law enforcement experience.

Supporters also say having a chief under the city manager allows for more efficient administration.

An elected chief reports to the public.

Albany also elects its city attorney and treasurer, practices that have also been challenged and defeated at the ballot box.

Chess

his younger students queries.

"No, not a blunder, just a mistake in strategy. Even Grand Masters make mistakes," Haines replies.

After the 45-minute instruction and dialogue, the group breaks up with children and adults alike immediately knocking heads over the chess board. Some dig-in on the floor with their own personal boards and game pieces, others scoot into tables and begin their stare-downs — they all have a game face.

In one corner, 8-year-old Adam Zittel and 10-year-old William Skinner get right into their competition.

Zittel jots his own and his opponent's moves down in a hardbound book and studies each move with a scratch of his chin.

"I'm writing down the game, I want to be able to record this," Zittel says without breaking his eyesight and train of thought from the table.

And what does he like about the game that keeps bringing him back to this room on a sunny evening?

"All of the varieties of moves you can have. It's like a bucket of apples with the varieties of all the moves."

Haines walks around the room and checks up on each game and offers advice when asked.

He talks of the benefits of the game, how it improves a child's IQ, and how it offers good lessons in life.

"To be a good chess player, you have to look at things as they are," says Haines. "When you see a problem, you have to deal with it and move on. You can't fool yourself in chess."

He also adds that the game helps the youngsters cope in the classroom by teaching the benefits of studying.

"Chess yields easily to study. If you study at chess you will get better," he says. "And that's good because when you get a kid to see that studying works, it leads to all sorts of things."

Sitting just below where Haines is standing, Zittel and Skinner are still in a stare down.

Skinner has an easy and intimidating reply to what his strategy is.

"It's just an attack," he says.

Man, these jocks are ruthless.

Baseball

the team has an unfair reputation as "cheaters" and questioned why, according to the parents, African American players are concentrated on the Lions. Lions' parents said the team often wins games by 20 or more runs and that this may result in tension.

"You have less than 20 African-American kids in the Pinto (League) and you have 10 on one team — is that ironic?," said Ira Coogler of Richmond, a parent of two league players. Coogler said that at a recent game he heard an Eagles' parent refer to Lions' players as "monkeys." "When I asked her about it, she denied it, wouldn't give me her name," packed her bags and left with her son, Coogler said.

Coogler, who is black, said the controversy about player rotation is not the real problem. He said that his 10-year-old son has asked him why he is not invited to gatherings after the game with other kids. "That's the problem — that's the big thing — this other stuff is irrelevant," Coogler said.

Sue Yeazel said her son is one of two white players on the Lions. After her son joined the team, Yeazel said she received an e-mail from a (non-Lions) parent offering to help get her son off the Lions. Yeazel also said parents from other teams have asked her why her son is on the Lions. During a discussion about player rotation questions, Yeazel said she felt the team is being hanged before the trial. "I've never felt that in my life before and I can't help wonder if it's racism," or a leftover legacy, she said.

Cheryl Sudduth, a Lions' parent, said the kids are in the league not just there to learn baseball, but also good sportsmanship. "No one group of 7- and 8-year-olds should be walking on pins and needles because they're afraid to play because they may beat somebody by 30 or 40 (runs)," Sudduth said. "They should be out there having fun. If they win they win; if they lose they lose. Let's not make it into 'the Lions are bad people; this one group of people are the bad people and everybody watch these people,'" for rule infractions, she said.

"The real controversy stems not only from having the minority team of the league, but also having a minority team led by minority coaches," Sudduth said earlier this week. Sudduth said she agreed with a comment made at the meeting that if it were a minority team led by a white coach "I don't believe they would be getting as much attention."

David Jung, president of the board of directors for El Cerrito Youth Baseball, said the substitution rule violation (non-rotation) and misconduct allegations will be investigated per league rules. The Pinto League president will investigate the written charges of misconduct. The president's decision can be appealed to a grievance committee. He said the non-rotation protest will be investigated by a protest committee of three presidents from other leagues.

Jung said that if the majority of Lions' players are African-American, it is because the manager and coaches of the Lions, who are also African-American, drafted and chose those players. "If the Lions are a racially identifiable team — that is the only team in El Cerrito baseball of our 30 teams that would be identifiable as predominately one ethnicity," Jung said. "And that is because of the choices made by the coaches in drafting the team — 100 percent," he added.

Jung was asked about complaints that the Lions are under extra scrutiny for rule violations. "There were complaints about the Lions' team last year," he said. "As a result of those complaints, the league has kept a close eye on the Lions' team to ensure that that situation doesn't repeat itself."

Jung said the complaints were about violations of the substitution (player rotation) rule and "overzealous parental participation that created an atmosphere that wasn't positive to playing."

It was pointed out that some Lions' parents feel racial bias comes into play to explain this year's scrutiny. "I understand that they think that," Jung said. "The Lions were the only team last year about which there were persistent complaints; and therefore they're the team that this year was — I don't want to say (under) scrutiny — because they really weren't," Jung said. "I can understand how they would feel that way and I am deeply sorry. The league is deeply sorry if they interpreted that as anything other than the desire to see that the league's rules are fairly enforced and that the children play in a positive atmosphere."

At last week's board meeting, Lions' parent Darrell Kelley, who is African American, volunteered to serve on the El Cerrito Youth Baseball board of directors. Jung and other parents at the meeting welcomed Kelley's offer. El Cerrito Mayor Larry Damon was at the meeting and suggested forming a "small task group" learn lessons from the deeper issues. "What's happened here tonight has built over a long period of time; it didn't just suddenly flash up," Damon said and urged the parents to "pull something positive out of this."

The controversy has apparently not yet affected the kids' love of bat and glove. Yeazel said her 7-year-old son goes to the library to checkout books and videos about baseball. "For all the garbage that's been going on, the kids just love it," she said about the game.

Budget

As for the $2 million being transferred into the capital facilities maintenance fund, "We'll come back in September with suggestions" Hanin said this week.

"There wasn't a consensus among the council what to designate it for" he said. "We want to start the new fiscal year, get rolling, and then come back with some recommendations for how to spend it."

At the June 5 budget session Councilman Mark Friedman said the reserve could be used in the future for a civic center project that would include a new library, Public Safety building and City Hall. "I would like to save as much money as we can with an eye toward that being our next major project," Friedman said. "I'm not saying to start it today, but to start thinking about it seriously today."

There's lots happening at historic Tilden Regional Park

By Ned MacKay

PROBABLY THE BEST KNOWN of all the East Bay Regional Parks, Tilden Park in Berkeley is also one of the oldest. It opened in 1936, just two years after the formation of the park district itself.

Tilden is one of the most diverse parks in the district. Within its 2,077 acres, you will find a spectrum of outdoor recreational resources. Adjoining Tilden on the north is 2,431-acre Wildcat Canyon Regional Park, preserved in open space for hiking and nature study. You can enter Tilden Regional Park from Berkeley on Canon Drive, Wildcat Canyon Road, Shasta Road, Golf Course Road or South Park Drive. All are accessible from Grizzly Peak Boulevard.

Although it is next to Berkeley, almost all of Tilden Regional Park is actually located in Contra Costa County.

Go down Canon Drive, turn left on Central Park Drive, and you will reach Tilden Environmental Education Center and Little Farm, the headquarters for nature programs and special events.

The education center houses an unusual exhibit, a walk-through model of the Wildcat Creek watershed with interactive exhibits highlighting the creek's natural and cultural history. The Little Farm introduces city kids to domestic animals, such as chickens, geese, cows and goats. Center hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Mondays, throughout the year.

The center also is the venue for free music concerts. For more information about concerts and nature programs, phone the center at 510-525-2233.

At the corner of Canon and Central Park drives is the Tilden pony ride area for children. It's open on weekends now, then daily from June 19 through Labor Day. For more information, call 510-527-0421.

If you prefer mechanical ponies, continue up Central Park Drive to Tilden's historic merry-go-round, with its hand-carved carousel animals. The merry-go-round phone number is 510-524-6773.Near the merry-go-round is the swim beach at Lake Anza. The beach will be open daily from Saturday through Oct. 7, with lifeguard service from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Your next stop is the Brazil Building, at the corner of Shasta Road and Wildcat Canyon Road. Constructed by Depression-era work crews, it has interior paneling from the Brazilian exhibit at the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island. The Brazil Building is available for weddings, receptions and meetings. Phone 510-540-0220 for information and reservations.

Right next to the Brazil Room is the Regional Parks Botanic Garden, which has the largest collection of California native plants in the world. Something is almost always in bloom there. Hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Phone 510-841-8732 for information.

The hill on Golf Course Road via Shasta Road is Tilden's 18-hole golf course, driving range and practice green. It is open daily, year-round. Call 510-848-7373 for hours and fees.

Tilden's miniature steam train, a favorite of generations, is located on Grizzly Peak Boulevard and Lomas Cantadas. It's open on weekends now, then daily from June 18 through Labor Day. Phone 510-548-6100.

Besides these attractions, Tilden has picnic areas, reservable group camping areas and miles of hiking trails with some spectacular views of the Bay

Come 'Rally for Sally' on behalf of ALS research

Have you seen that TV commercial featuring Lou Gehrig's stirring farewell address at Yankee Stadium? Guess what the Yankees did the day after they threw that big party?

They fired him. They stopped his paycheck. It wasn't bad enough that the poor guy was dying; he had to go out and get a job to pay his bills during the time it took him to die.

In a way, Gehrig's story is a perfect metaphor for the way we treat everyone who has the disease that now bears his name: We cast them out in the cold.

There is not enough being spent on finding a cure, either by the government or by the private sector. It's a question of numbers: Lou Gehrig's Disease — or, as the scientists call it, ALS — may be a horrible way to die; but statistically speaking, there aren't as many people with it as there are people with other diseases.

Because of their small numbers, ALS patients don't have the political clout to lobby for government research grants. Nor do they represent a very lucrative market for the drug companies. So nothing gets done.

Much of the money that's raised has to go to ALS patients themselves, and their families, to help them cope with the devastating financial damage ALS can wreak on a family's budget.

Another obstacle to raising money is that people who get ALS usually don't last very long. So it's hard to find a celebrity to act as front man, the way Michael J. Fox is doing for Parkinson's Disease.

In fact, people usually don't get active in fighting ALS unless they know someone who has it.

Like Al Hart, the beloved longtime morning anchor at KCBS. His wife Sally is dying from ALS.

I hate to use the word "dying," but it's Sally's word, not mine. ALS is a progressive neurodegenerative disease that attacks the motor neurons, making even the simplest movements — speaking, walking, gesturing — nearly impossible.

It is always fatal. There is no treatment and no cure.

Each individual case progresses in its own way, and it's hard to predict which part of the body will go next. In Sally's case, it's her facial muscles. She can't talk anymore.

But she can still use her hands. So she communicates by typing on a hand-held computer. I was at their house the other day, and she wrote matter-of-factly, "After I die. . ."

It was painful for me to read. If you only knew Sally Hart! What a wonderful combination of a good head and a good heart! The mind rebels against the very idea that such a lovely human being will be leaving us soon.

But she's accepted her fate with a serenity that I can only hope to emulate when my time comes. She knows it's too late for her.

But it might not be too late for ALS patients who come after her, if we finally say enough is enough and decide to lick this terrible affliction, once and for all.

That's why she and Al are throwing themselves into an all-out effort to get ALS off the back burner and thrust it into the forefront of our consciousness. They could be spending the little time they have left together off by themselves. They're so much in love, it would be an easy thing to do.

But that would be selfish, and Sally and Al are two of the most unselfish people I know. They're not doing this for themselves, really, they're doing it for us.

Sally may be willing to accept her fate, but she is not willing to accept our indifference.

In that spirit, let me invite you to join Al, Sally and me at Lake Merritt on June 24, a week from Sunday, for a walk around the lake to raise awareness of ALS and raise funds for research into its cure.

The walk is an easy three miles — all level ground — and you don't have to walk the whole thing. Showing up is the main thing. It starts at 10 a.m. at the Bandstand, off Bellevue Avenue. If you want to sign up officially, registration begins at 9 a.m.

If you can contribute something to the fight — great! If you just want to join the crowd and walk to raise awareness — wonderful! Bring the family. Bring friends. "I know this is a busy time of year for all of us," says Al. "But if you can spare a couple of hours for Sally and me on June 24, we would really appreciate it."

The official title of the event is "Walk to D'Feet ALS." (Pretty corny, huh?) But I prefer Al's title. Says he: "I'm calling it a 'Rally For Sally.'"

Hope to see you there.

Albany school board member resigns

By Tom Lochner
STAFF WRITER

ALBANY — The composition of the Albany school board is in limbo, with the resignation Tuesday of one board member and an effort under way to recall the board president.

In a resignation letter to the board, Trustee Owen T. Jones, who was elected in November, cited "overwhelming and unexpected personal issues" for his decision. The board approved the resignation 3-0 — Jones and Bill Cain were absent.

Minutes earlier, board President Marsha Skinner was given official notice that a group of residents planned to launch a recall petition against her.

The notice, which was signed by about 30 people, accused Skinner of "bad faith contract bargaining," in the ongoing labor dispute between teachers — whom the group supports — and the board.

Contract negotiations are stalled, and teachers have threatened a strike in the fall.

The recall notice said that Skinner failed to answer budget-related questions at school board meetings. It also took her to task for "failing to honor" a tentative contract agreed to by district negotiators last fall that would have given teachers a 10 percent salary increase; and for voting in March to cut teacher jobs instead of one of three district superintendent positions.

Skinner voted with the majority when the board rejected the tentative contract and when it cut nine teaching positions as part of cuts totaling more than $500,000 a year.

She and Cain have said that giving in to teacher demands could bankrupt the district.

John Kindle, a spokesman for the recall group, declined comment when asked if his group will seek Cain's recall as well.

Cain, who had excused himself from Tuesday's meeting to attend an international engineers meeting in San Diego, could not be reached for comment.

Skinner said she was not surprised by the recall action, which several speakers had threatened at board meetings during the last few months.

She characterized it as "unproductive," coming a year before her term runs out in November 2002. She cannot run again because of term limits.

"I don't have a personal need to wield the gavel," Skinner said. "My main concern isn't whether I'm personally in office. My main concern is that this is bound to take time and energy. And it may take money."

The petitioners need the signatures of 25 percent of Albany's registered voters to force a recall election, said Cynthia Cornejo of the Alameda County Registrar's Office.

A special election could cost the district between $1.50 and $2 per registered voter, Cornejo said. With 9,561 registered voters in Albany, that could come out as high as $19,000.

If the recall coincides with a regular election, it would cost only 30 to 50 cents per registered voter, or as little as $2,900.

The board will discuss how to replace Jones at its June 26 meeting.

Jones recently had offended teachers and their supporters with a widely circulated e-mail message that likened Albany's teachers during the current salary imbroglio to "pigs slopping at the trough."

The board accepted Jones' resignation with little comment other than a letter by Cain, read at the meeting, saying Jones had "crossed a line over which he cannot step back."

miles of hiking trails with some spectacular views of the Bay Area.

Tilden Regional Park is named for Maj. Charles Lee Tilden, a businessman and Spanish American War veteran who was one of the prime movers behind the creation of the East Bay Regional Park District in 1934.

He was one of the original park district board members and served until his death in 1950.

When you visit the park, take a moment to think about Maj. Tilden and the other community leaders who had the foresight to preserve a beautiful area for public enjoyment.

Ned MacKay is public information supervisor for the East Bay Regional Park District.

One-of-a-kind home in the El Cerrrito hills

■ Architectural gem has been featured in "Sunset Magazine."

PRUDENTIAL CALIFORNIA REALTY

Come home to this unique residence located on a quiet El Cerrito cul-de-sac with breathtaking views of San Francisco Bay.

Open-beamed ceilings complement the sunken living room with fireplace. Enjoy entertaining indoors in the home's formal dining room and out on the large deck..

The home, which has been designed for energy efficiency, includes three bedrooms — the master suite is complete with cathedral ceilings and fireplace — and two and one-half exquisitely tiled baths.

The property is complete with a beautiful, low-maintenance landscaped garden, a two-car garage and a separate workshop.

To see this property, offered at $725,000 contact Carol Heath-Kim at Prudential California Realty at 510-527-9800.

A walk through the sales process

Number 367 in a series of true experiences in real estate

TARPOFF AND TALBERT
True Experiences

A reader wrote to us this week with several questions about selling her house.

"We are hoping to put our place on the market this summer. I am now going through 10 years of accumulation and want to know when we should bring in an agent. Can agents get an idea of how much the house will be worth when it's hard to get around in the basement and garage?

"How much of repairs and prep do agents handle?

"Finally, we have had a number of people interested in the house and have thought about the possibility of selling it without an agent but, if we did, we would need to consult on all the intricacies of the sale as well as get an idea of how much the property is worth. What do you think?

DearReader,

Thanks for writing. If you intend to get your house on the market this summer, it is certainly not too early to call in an agent. We often meet with sellers a year or more ahead of time while the house is still chock full and decisions are yet to be made. Seeing the house sooner rather than later is good for a couple of reasons. Owners frequently think they must do things that in fact they don't need to do. We can make recommendations about repairs, painting, clearing out, and having pre-sale inspections made.

Also, we like knowing about houses we might list well ahead of marketing because it gives us the chance to closely watch other sales in the neighborhood over a period of time. Then we can zero in on the appropriate list price when the house does go on the market.

Most agents help sellers with advice and also give the names of workmen they know. Usually sellers take care of their own prep and inspections, but not always. We are, for example, right now taking care of most everything for two houses we will be listing this summer. We have met the inspectors, collected bids for work, reported to the sellers, and made recommendations about what should be done. Now we will watch over the work and staging.

Usually we do this work when the house is vacant (when we can go at any time and so can the workmen) and usually because the owner lives out of town (true on both counts for our current projects.) It is possible to do these things with the owner living in the house, but it's harder. If you are living there, you might as well meet the termite man, let the painter in to give you a bid (or whatever), and you may be planning to do some or all of the prep work yourself. We wouldn't need to be there a lot, might even get in your way.

But every situation is different, and we should discuss what would work best for you.

We don't always have time to do consulting, but when we do we enjoy it. When consulting, we do not act as agents but rather as educators. For example, we will not give values for houses as part of consulting because, if we did, we would be acting as agents. We do not want you or the buyer later saying that the value we guessed at — without any open marketing — was wrong. So, if what you want is to know the value of your house and you don't plan on using an agent, you will need to get an independent appraisal (cost about $350 to $400).

Once you and your buyer have agreed on a price, we will walk you through the paperwork, but we won't do any negotiating (that's up to you), nor will we write the contract (again, because we won't be acting as agents). Most people with whom we have consulted hired a real estate attorney write up the contract.

We charge an hourly fee for consulting for which we will tell you what you need to know to comply with disclosure laws, obtaining and reading inspection reports, the customs in our area (who typically pays for what, for example). We will help you figure your costs of sale, open an escrow, figure the length of time to allow for the buyer's contingencies, and so forth.

There are a couple of potential problems with selling directly. First of all, it means that you are on the front line. There is no intermediary, just the two of you trying to work things out. The biggest problem can be that there is no one providing guidance for the buyer. If he freaks out over something and/or does not understand, for example, what needs to be done to get a loan in a timely manner, he has no one to turn to for advice and comfort.

Perhaps more important to you, you will never really know what the market value of your house is. An appraisal is an educated guess about what a ready, willing and able buyer will pay for a house after adequate exposure to the market. Many houses in this market sell for more than the appraised value. If you sell directly, you will never know what you might have received for your house.

Having said all that, a direct sale can go just fine. People happily do it all the time. They do it because it makes sense to them. Sometimes they can't bear the thought of putting the house on the market, having people come through the house, leaving every time someone wants to see it. Others sell directly because they would prefer that a friend or a tenant get the house rather than a stranger.

You need to ask yourself what your goals are. Do you need/want to sell for the highest possible price? What are you willing to do in order to achieve your goals?

We would be glad to come see your house, and if there is the potential that you would list with us, we would do this for free (part of our services for which we would hope to be paid a commission). Not that you would necessarily be wed to us. We would meet and see if it's a good fit from both sides. It is important that you are represented by someone you like and trust because if you list with an agent, it will become an intimate relationship.

ONE OF THESE BUILDINGS at 1519 and 1515 Oxford St. in Berkeley is a condominium, fondly called " a condo " and the other is a cooperative, known just as fondly as a " co-op." And they are really very different legal entities.

Co-op or condo: Can you tell the difference?

BY BARBARA HENDRICKSON
RED OAK REALTY

Two buildings sit on Berkeley's Oxford Street. Built in 1954 and 1957 they look very much alike, with the clean, straight lines of post war "modern architecture." The earlier building at 1519 Oxford has 11 units, one that is twice as large as the others.

It was customized for the builder and his family and looks out at both the bay and the hills. The building at 1515 has 12 units plus a common upper floor with a bay and hill view recreation room and laundry. Both buildings have elevators and off-street parking for residents.

So what is the difference? The viewer's eye cannot discern a difference but the legal documents, which are transferred from seller to buyer, tell it all. One of these buildings is a condominium, fondly called " a condo " and the other is a cooperative, known just as fondly as a " co-op." And they are really very different legal entities.

A condominium is a single unit, which is solely owned by the purchaser, in so far as what lies within the four walls of her domain. She also owns along with all other unit owners, an "undivided interest" in the common elements of the buildings including the land on which it sits, driveways, and parking areas, common gardens, the lobby, public halls and pools other recreation facilities if any.

The condominium association, which governs, through an elected board of condominium owners, is also the owner of and is responsible for all electrical, mechanical, plumbing, heating and air conditioning systems that provide service to the building. Individual owners are responsible for any of the above within their own units.

The board's authority to operate the building is set forth in the "condominium declaration" and by-laws that are set forth at the beginning of the process, when the condominium is created.

In a condominium, owners receive deeds to their individual units, obtain their own mortgage and make their own payments as well as their own real estate taxes, just like I do in my single family home. The payments of interest and the real estate tax payments are deductible from taxable income.

While there are many rules within a condominium, owners have much more say in about what they do with their units, subject to any regulations stated in the by-laws. Each is treated like an individual entity belonging to a home owners association with some rules and regulations detailing what can and cannot be changed, e.g. the outside colors, but usually not anything that affects the interior of any unit.

Most condominiums do not prevent owners from renting out their units.

Local Real estate attorney Fred Hertz implores me to remind all that a co-op is a "non profit" corporation, with each unit assigned a number of shares.

The number of shares allotted to each apartment must be fair and reasonable, based on such factors as size, number of rooms and location of each apartment. The shares entitle the holder to long-term proprietary lease for a specific apartment.

The lease defines the purchaser's rights and obligations with

What are liquidated damages?

DON DUNNING
What You Don't Know Can Hurt You

When a buyer defaults on his purchase contract, there can be substantial financial harm to the seller. The exact amount of the damage may be difficult to determine. A paragraph in the contract deals with the problem, but principals and agents often misunderstand it. This is the "Liquidated Damages" clause.

What it says

A liquidated damage is an agreement, in advance, of what will happen if a buyer defaults. It becomes part of the contract only if buyer and seller initial the clause. Once agreed upon, if a buyer "fails to complete" his purchase at a point where he no longer has grounds to withdraw, the seller may be able to keep the deposit.

A buyer's default happens after he has removed all of his contingencies (e.g., inspections and financing) and, subsequently, does not close the escrow. In general, if the buyer backs out because of a contingency, the seller is obligated to release the buyer's deposit in a timely fashion.

Although the clause explains, "release of funds will require mutual, signed release instructions from both buyer and seller," some mistakenly assume the seller automatically receives the deposit upon the buyer's default. The seller may have to pursue arbitration or a judicial decision if the buyer later refuses to release the liquidated damages portion of the deposit.

From the seller's perspective, once the buyer has waived all contingencies, the buyer has no valid reason to withdraw, regardless of what else is happening in his life. Bear in mind that a seller may rely on the buyer's promise to perform and make plans accordingly. Whether or not this is always a good idea is another issue, and is why advice from an experienced, professional agent is indispensable.

If the property contains no more than four "dwellings," the maximum allowed the liquidated damages clause is 3 percent of the purchase price. Contracts that include the liquidated damages clause are commonly written with a deposit of less than three per cent. Astute listing agents recommend, if the liquidated damages are accepted, their sellers counter, increasing the deposit to 3 percent. In order for the increased deposit to be counted as liquidated damages, however, a second form must be signed by both parties. Many times, this is overlooked.

To include or not include

In my career, only once have I seen a buyer voluntarily release liquidated damages to a seller. On a practical basis, the clause is not a "deal breaker" one way or the other. What is most important is that the buyer has a substantial deposit with the title company. More money in escrow usually equates to more incentive on the buyer's part to close the sale.

In the most popular neighborhoods, where prices start at $400,000 and go to well over one million dollars, the deposit may range from $10,000 to $35,000, depending on the offer amount. The seller should look on a low deposit with suspicion.

Remember, it is not always clear who benefits from liquidated damages. For example, a buyer may forfeit $15,000 on a $500,000 transaction. If the property later sold for $450,000, the liquidated damages obviously did not make the seller whole. On the other hand, if the ultimate sales price was $495,000, the seller profited.

There have been many instances where I have presented a contract on behalf of a buyer with a deposit of much greater than 3 percent, but with no liquidated damages. This would be appropriate in a multiple-offer situation to strengthen the buyer's bid.

As an example, a $600,000 offer would have a $25,000 deposit. When the seller questions why the clause was not included, I explain that it is to the seller's advantage. The buyer has not limited his liability to only $18,000.

Final thoughts

The key concept is what happens if the buyer does not follow through and close after he has no contingencies. The liquidated damages clause limits the buyer's liability, but may not be best for the seller. Conversely, on properties not in competition, some buyers would prefer to have no liquidated damages, but a smaller deposit.

Over the years, I have seen some agents either gloss over their explanation of liquidated damages, or simply not mention them at all. Before making or accepting an offer, be sure you are clear on the critical nature of the deposit amount.

Taking a look at adjustable rate mortgages

KAREN SENZIG
Mortgage Madness

So you watched Alan Greenspan cut the short-term rates. You listened to the analysts who all agreed this should be the best time for the lowest fixed rates in years.

You decided to purchase a new home with this in mind or decided the time was right to refinance. But rates did not go down. Your loan has been pre-approved at your desired rate, but the rate is just not there, at least not at what you want to pay for it. So,what do you do?

Perhaps a low-cost or no-cost adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) would fit your needs for now and set you up to refinance again when the analysts predictions of very low fixed-interest rates come true sometime in the future.

What kind of ARM should you look at? First you need to know the basic elements of an ARM. Every ARM is based on an index, a margin, a start rate, a life cap, an adjustment cap and a period of adjustment.

The interest rate is based on an index. Here are the most common indices:

The 11th District Cost of Funds Index (COFI) is the average costs of deposits and borrowings for savings institutions in the Federal Home Loan Bank's 11th district consisting of the states of California, Arizona and Nevada. It is a 12-month weighted average and therefore moves very slowly.

Many in the industry believe that the index peaked at 5.68 percent in February 2001, and is heading down. The June index is 4.95 percent.The index changes monthly.

The Monthly Treasury Average (MTA) is also a 12-month weighted average based on the one-month United States Treasury security adjusted to a constant maturity of one year. Also a slow-moving index, as of June it is 5.53 percent. The index changes monthly.

The Constant Maturity Average (CMT) index is the weekly average yield on United States Treasury securities adjusted to a constant maturity of one year The June CMT Index averaged 3.64 percent.

The London Inter-Branch Offered Rate (LIBOR) is the average of lending rates from a number of major banks based in London. The LIBOR is commonly used as an international interest-rate index. Considered by many in the industry as more volatile and market sensitive than the previous indices. The six-month LIBOR index in June averaged 3.909 percent and the one year LIBOR averaged 4.149 percent.

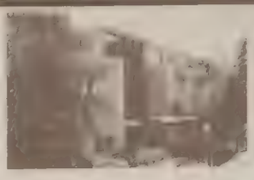

The only thing fixed about an adjustable rate mortgage is the margin. Think about it as the lender's profit. The margin is added to the index to give you the "fully indexed" note rate. So, if you have chosen the COFI index at 4.946 percent and the lender's margin is 2.50 percent, the fully indexed note rate for June 2001 would be 7.446 percent.

The start rate is an initial lower-than-the-fully-indexed rate for either a teaser of one or three months, incurring negative amortization thereafter, or set for periods of six months, one, three, five , seven or 10 years.

The life cap is the maximum the fully indexed interest rate may increase. The life cap can be a set rate as is common with a COFI and MTA loan, usually capping at 10.95 or 11.95 percent or as a formula such as the start rate plus 5 or 6 percent

A good example is the 3/1, which is fixed for 3 years at 6.75 percent and then automatically slides into a one year T-Bill (similar to the CMT) At the period of adjustment (in this case at the 37th month), a margin of 2.75 would be added to the index at that time to set the borrower's fully indexed note rate.

Difference

and occupancy, much like the by-laws of a condominium. And the incorporation functions like a homeowners association although the powers are slightly different.

If a co-op has a mortgage, the corporation pays the principal and interest and the shareholders pay a maintenance fee, which includes each apartment's portion of that mortgage. This "maintenance" payment also includes insurance for the building, water, sewer changes, and the general upkeep on the underlying mechanical systems, roof, exterior, gardens etc. just like a condominium. Property taxes, computed at the time each sale of shares, are based on the price paid for the shares. Owners are free to sell their shares at any time at the going rate

One of the biggest differences between a condo and a co-op is that in some states the co-op has the right to refuse any potential purchaser of shares for any reason. Board approval is required and while approval may not be unreasonably withheld, it sometimes is. Perhaps you recall that a co-op in New York City refused to pass of the purchase of an apartment by Richard Nixon.

Fred Hertz says "There is more 'control' over individual members in a co-op, which can be good or bad depending on whether you are trying to do something annoying to others, or keep your neighbor from doing something that is annoying to you." What's good for the existing homeowners, the right to check references and approval of new owners, for example, does not necessarily feel good for the prospective purchaser until that purchaser becomes an owner and then when the shoe is on the foot, it can be just dandy.

So purchasing a co-op can be a great investment, a real buy, because if you have the cash or can manage the financing through private sources, you are definitely getting more for less.

Just by chance, I am representing two co-ops in the same building at 1519 Oxford Street in Berkeley. Unit D is spoken for and is in escrow but luckily Unit C is still available and is listed for $319,000.

So if you are tired of driving the hills, watering your garden or rattling around in the home that has out grown you, please give me (Barbara Hendrickson at Red Oak Realty 510-280-2140) or your Realtor, a call and take a look at this alternative life style.

The adjustment cap of 2 percent over the start rate protects the borrower from huge interest rate swings if the index moves out of control during the short term fixed rate period.

There are as many ARM loan products as there are mortgage lenders who all have their own variations on the same theme, however, there are essentially two types of structure. There is the short term fixed rate,as in the example above, that fully amortizes the loan. (Amortization is where all of the interest and a portion of the principal due is paid with each payment).

Then, there is the Option ARM. The Option ARM, favored by the big savings and loan institutions, gives the borrower three or four monthly payment options.

After the initial one or three month low teaser rate (lately as low as 3.5 percent), the borrower's monthly payment statement offers the following choices:

■ Less than interest only. This payment option is based on the initial low teaser rate, which is fixed for 12 months. The difference between the 3.5 percent payment and the fully indexed rate, interest only payment is called deferred interest and added to the principal. That is why it is called negative amortization, since you are adding to the principal balance instead of subtracting from it. The minimum payment increases by 7.5 percent(the payment, not the interest) every twelve months.

■ Interest Only. This option allows the borrower to avoid deferred interest but still enjoy a lower payment than the fully amortized payment.

■ Full Interest and Principal Payment. Decrease your principal and pay all current interest due with this payment so you can pay off you loan by the end of its original term.

■ 15-Year Payment. Build the equity in your home, pay off the mortgage faster, and save lots of money in interest by using this option.

Now that you are armed with the basics on ARMs,the adjustable rate mortgage may be the answer for you while waiting for long-term fixed rates to come down.

NOTICE
Contra Costa Newspapers/ Hills Newspapers
In cooperation with animal rescue groups, advises advertisers to always ask an adoption fee for animals. Giving away pets for "Free" can put them in danger. "Free" pets can easily end up being abused. No amount of screening can prevent this. Also, it is a good idea, when possible, to obtain the new owner's full name, full address & phone number. For more information, contact Tony LaRussa's Animal Rescue Foundation at 925-256-1ARF or your local pet adoption agency.

On course at Alameda Point, Galbraith

The renovation of Lake Chabot Golf Course into a world class facility is dead, but two other projects in Oakland and Alameda are proceeding very nicely. The new Galbraith Golf Course might open as early as November. And the new Alameda Point Golf Course, scheduled to open optimistically in 2004, more likely '05, looks to become everything Chabot wanted to be ... and much more.

Groundbreaking for the routing of the holes on the new Johnny Miller signature-design Galbraith course begins on Monday. Problems with the sand base (the sand was too fine for drainage) have been solved.

"We have the necessary two-foot base with the appropriate clay," said Dave Nichols, senior project manager for Heinbuch Construction, which is doing the job. "Sand stage two is done. We did have to truck in coarser sand to mix with the existing sand for that base, but everything's fine now. We're ready to go."

Galbraith is not expected to be a Taj Mahal, but neither will it have $20 green fees. Those fees have not been set yet. The city is examining current green fees in the Bay Area and promise the Galbraith fees will be competitive, with a reduced resident rate.

Nichols was at a meeting of the Alameda Point Golf Course design review committee at the former Naval Air Station on Wednesday, where architect Kyle Phillips presented a very preliminary design of the new course.

Phillips first showed pictures of his Kingsbarne links course, recently completed in St. Andrews, a course that received Golf Digest's "Best New Course of the Year" award.

"The design problems with Kingsbarne were very similar to the problems here at Alameda Point," Phillips said.

He showed pictures of the Kingsbarne site, before and after.

"This was not a natural site to begin with," Phillips pointed out. "Very much like the runways here."

The new Alameda Point Golf Course will be built where the two runways of the former air station intersect.

Phillips went on to say that golf on the water is really magical. His design has the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th holes on the water going around the point, from the estuary to the bay, and then back into the clubhouse, which is set back from the course.

"Build the golf course first, then the clubhouse and hotel," Phillips said. "The golf course is on the water, the buildings set back behind the course. It is important that there be views of the water from the golf course, not views of a hotel."

In his preliminary design there are many "double" fairways, side by side, separated only here and there by patches of gorse and fescue, like at St. Andrews. There are also a couple of double greens, like at St. Andrews.

A grass practice facility is to the east (below) the hotel. At the far end of the range is a small nine-hole course. Parts of this course, Phillips explained, can be used as a golf school.

That kind of practice facility would have Dave Pelz salivating.

The hotel will not be a tall building, for two reasons: the fish and wildlife guys at the refuge bordering the course will not stand for it, and most destination resorts do not have

TEN-YEAR-OLD ROBERT LERMA (right) is an all-star Little Leaguer who will soon undergo surgery to relieve respiratory and hearing problems.

A baseball season on hold

Up coming surgery cuts short 10-year-old's season

By Dean Rosener
CORRESPONDENT

He treats the diamond like a jewel.

Ten-year-old Robert Lerma of Albany Little League extends his love for baseball beyond his own excellent play. While still participating in a game, the youngster volunteers to be groundskeeper, third-base coach, equipment manager and batboy. His fresh affection for the game forces others to see it anew.

Charming the crowd particularly is Lerma's helpful, between-innings habit of moving the ball right next to the pitcher's rubber, and tidying up the mound, en route to his shortstop position.

But on June 7 at Village Field, the crowd's joy over his enthusiasm was tempered by the knowledge that it would be Lerma's last game of the summer. He will miss the second half of the season, undergoing throat surgery on July 20 at Oakland-Kaiser Hospital. The surgery is to relieve serious hearing and breathing problems, and he will be able to return home that night.

"When we first told him," said mother Christina, "Robert emphatically said, 'I don't want to have surgery.'

"He was very quiet that first day. But the next day he said, 'If they have to do it, they have to do it.' "

Lerma's adenoids and tonsils are too long and they are blocking both his hearing canal and his ability to breathe through his nose. The condition originally was thought to be allergies. Only when the family took the 10-year-old to an ear-nose-and-throat specialist did it discover that his condition was more serious.

"The doctors said it should be routine surgery," said his father, Pete. "But it's not routine for him or for us. He's a little sparkplug, though."

Just 10 in a 9- to 12-year-old league, the talented youngster is a standout shortstop, center fielder and pitcher.

"I like pitching best," he said. "I only throw fastballs, because I don't know how to throw anything else."

On June 7 Lerma's Diamondbacks romped over the Reds, 17-3, to end their season at 18-5, just missing the playoffs.

■ Mr. Baseball

Diamondback player, Giant fan. In May, Lerma made his first pilgrimage to Pacific Bell Park.

"It was cool, it was amazing," he said.

Further boosting the ballplayer's morale are older siblings Jeremiah, John and Jessica McKinley. A trio of former or current athletes, Jeremiah and John were multi-sport competitors, Jessica a cheerleader, at Albany High School.

"I took Robert to play catch shortly after he learned about the surgery," Jeremiah said. "We just threw the ball back and forth for awhile. Then we talked about it quietly."

"I reminded him that we will all be there for him," Jessica said.

In his last game of the summer, the 10-year-old made big contributions offensively and defensively in the one-sided win.

But there was more work to do. Volunteering to coach third base, the all-purpose energizer sprinted from that spot to retrieve a bat, then placed it in the dugout. With his great speed, he seemed to be back in the coaches' box about two seconds after he left it.

Of his precocious whirlwind, coach Anthony Freeman said: "Most 10-year-olds, in our nine-to-12 league, are in a developmental stage. But Robert, with his tremendous speed and great arm, is way beyond developmental."

Rodriguez seeing red, white, blue

STAFF REPORT

At last year's First Union US-PRO Cycling Championships in Philadelphia, Fred Rodriguez won the U.S. national championship jersey despite finishing second to Henk Vogels of Australia. Rodriguez, currently of Emeryville and formerly of Piedmont, was the top American finisher, and thus earned the right to the red, white and blue jersey.

On Sunday, Rodriguez returned to the City of Brotherly Love for this year's First Union Pro Cycling Championships. And this time, he took a more direct route to the championship jersey, finishing first overall. Rodriguez completed the 156-mile event in 5 hours, 57 minutes and 56 seconds.

"My team director told me that we were concentrating on the U.S. title," Rodriguez said in a Threshold Sports report posted on the USA Cycling Web site. "Getting the overall win was an incredible bonus."

Rodriguez, 27, who lost in a sprint to Vogels last year, did not wait to start his closing dash in the typical few hundred meters. Instead, he started his dash with about a half-mile remaining. And the tactic paid off as Rodriguez, representing the Domo Farm Frites team, finished five seconds ahead of Team Saturn's Trent Klasna.

George Hincapie of the U.S. Postal Service team placed third for the first 1-2-3 American finish in the race's 17-year history.

Rodriguez, along with five other riders — Klasna, Hincapie, Denmark's Jakob Storm Piil, Italy's Fabrizio Guidi and Spain's Pedro Munoz Horillo — broke away from the rest of the field with about 20 miles remaining. From that point, the six riders took turns attacking. Rodriguez broke free on the final lap, though, pulling into his closing dash at the far end of the Benjamin Franklin Parkway.

The other riders didn't have a chance.

Rodriguez, who won $40,000 for his effort, will head to next month's Tour de France wearing the U.S. championship jersey for the second straight year.

In women's competition, Germany's Petra Rossner, 34, won the First Union Liberty Classic for the fourth straight time and fifth time overall. Rossner rides for Team Saturn.

Berkeley falls short of medaling at US Invitational

By Scott Strain

Two teams from the Berkeley High crew organization returned to the U.S. Rowing Youth Invitational last weekend in Cincinnati and, although they didn't win anything, they did get a healthy respect for what it takes to win at this level of competition.

Two teams, the Junior Men's Four with Coxswain (four) and the Junior Men's Double Sculls (double) traveled to Lake Harsha just outside Cincinnati to compete against the best high school-age teams in the nation.

Berkeley was one of the few public high school teams in the competition; the rest were either club teams or private schools.

"We go fifth place in the four final," said Berkeley coach Eric Christiani, who is in his fourth year (three as varsity coach) coaching boys crew. "We started out slow in the final race and then came on. That's been our pattern this season, but it is difficult to do when you face these types of teams."

Two seniors, Matt Renner (coxswain) and Eric Davidson; two juniors, Yoshi Katsuura and David Garber; and one sophomore, Jordan Bice, represented

Weakley: Yanks come calling

Yankees take Cougar SS in 33rd round of 1st-year draft

By Mike McGreehan
STAFF WRITER

Imagine being 18 years old and on the verge of realizing a dream. Imagine that dream as a baseball career. Now imagine getting selected in the Major League Baseball first-year player draft. Imagine further getting drafted by the Yankees.

For Albany High School graduating senior shortstop Chris Weakley, at least part of his dream became reality as the Yankees selected him in the 33rd round of this year's draft on June 6.

"I wasn't at home (when the Yankees phoned)," Weakley said. "I was actually in school and my mom came into one of my classes. I had no idea why. Then she mouthed the words, 'You were drafted.' At first, I didn't believe it. It didn't feel real."

Well, it was real. And now Weakley and his family have plenty of realities facing them. Primary among those realities is the knowledge that professional sports careers often don't pan out — especially for 33rd-round picks. And especially for 33-round picks selected by a team as successful as the Yankees.

"As parents, we were petrified he would be drafted earlier and skip school," said Jana Lord, Weakley's mother.

At least six other teams expressed interest in Weakley, some looking to select him much higher. Weakley, though, likely will go to Laney College — or possibly Diablo Valley College — next year.

"A lot of teams came out and watched (my games with Albany High and the Lafayette Generals Connie Mack team)," Weakley said. "I would be faced with the questions, 'What would you sign for,' and 'What round would you sign at.' It's kind of tough when you're 18 years old and haven't been out in the world before. It's kind of push and pull."

Since the Yanks hold Weakley's draft rights until five days before the next draft, the player has the luxury of one season in junior college to mull the offer. Or like many other first-time draftees, he can opt to stay in school and hope to get drafted again.

Soccer — getting to know all about it

MIKE McGREEHAN
Between the Lines

For those of us from the so-called Baby Boom generation, soccer was a sport played mostly overseas, by immigrants, and by the great foreign stars of the North American Soccer League. Most of today's soccer parents never played youth soccer. It just wasn't available to them while growing up.

Today's young players have it much better than their parent ever did. Youth soccer, high school soccer, Olympic Development, State Cup, regional tournaments, national tournaments, international tournaments — the whole nine yards. And it only keeps getting better.

Two years ago, the United Soccer Leagues — an organization of leagues below Major League Soccer and, now, the Women's United Soccer Association — launched something called the Super Y-League for under-14 and under-15 boys. The Florida-based Super-Y League expanded last year to include under-16 boys and this year welcomes under-18 girls. Among those participating is the Bay Oaks Select Soccer League, which has dubbed its Super Y-League entrant the "Under-18 Girls All-Star Soccer Team."

Through three matches, the team is 1-2, though the players keep progressing. After a 3-1 opening loss to Tri-Valley on June 5, the All-Stars took on the San Juan under-19 select team of Sacramento at Oakport Field on Saturday. The All-Stars played well — well enough to win or at least tie — but walked off the field with a 2-1 loss after some unlucky shots and an iffy penalty call.

Though the team finally earned its first win Sunday — 2-1 over Santa Rosa in Concord — results are secondary to the experience the players gain.

The Super Y-League, you see, isn't your average club soccer, where teams adhere to strict age-group standards. The Bay Oaks All-Stars, for instance, have players who graduate high school this month as well as some up to two years younger.

And the Super Y-League is a far, far cry from the type of soccer players experience with their high school teams. Referees call fewer fouls, give fewer cards, and allow the game to flow. Players and coaches also adhere to international rules regarding length of game (two 45-minute halves), substitutions (a substituted player can't re-enter) and yellow cards (players receiving a yellow card stay on the field, rather than come off as they do in high school).

"It's a much more professional attitude — and when I say 'professional,' it's from the standpoint that the pace of the game is really high and that the referees are the best in the area," says All-Stars assistant J.T. Hanley, who coaches many of the same players on the club and high school level with the Bay Oaks Blues under-18s and Bishop O'Dowd. "The attitude is much more professional — more of a European or South American club philosophy."

Clubs on those continents, such as AC Milan or Boca Juniors of Buenos Aires, often will take a youth player under their wings and guide him through their junior levels, reserves, and ultimately, to the top-level team. Soccer clubs in this country aren't yet that firmly established. But the Super Y-League represents part of a soccer network that continues to grow.

"Most of these kids are going to play in college," says Hanley. "We want them to be aware there's another level for them. We want them to be aware that the game keeps progressing, and there's going to be another level (above the one in which they're currently competing)."

For those of us in the media more acclimated to the sometimes nitpicking ways of high school sports, Super Y-League matches offer a different experience. Certainly, that was the case at Oakport on Saturday. Players played and the game flowed, even though it was evident that the All-Stars had yet to become fully acclimated to one another. Compared to prep soccer, the Super Y-League is roughly akin to driving for the first time without mom and dad in the car.

Of course, players have greater responsibilities at this level, too.

"The intensity is very high and it's incumbent on the players to be in good shape," says Hanley. "They get to experience the physical side of soccer they might not experience in high school."

Hanley and team manager Andy Bonchonsky (who also is the coaching coordinator for the Bay Oaks Select Soccer League) hope the All-Stars' experience also will benefit other players in the Bay Oaks system.

"These kids will go back to their club teams and they will help raise the level of play there, too," says Hanley.

Though the Super Y-League still is in its infancy, it surely is another positive step forward in terms of player development. Those who enjoy soccer at all levels should check out a match. It's a great chance to see some of the players of tomorrow getting their first taste of international-style soccer today.

American soccer: it just keeps getting better.

IN OTHER NEWS: The Bay Oaks Blues under-18 girls team is looking for donations as it prepares to head for Europe next month.

The Blues will play Friendship Games matches in Paris, July 5-10, and London, July 10-15. From there, the team heads to Gothenburg, Sweden, for the 27th annual Gothia Cup, one of the most prestigious youth soccer tournaments in the world.

Berkeley in the races.

Berkeley had to finish either first or second at the Pacific Southwest Regionals held three weeks ago at Lake Natoma in Sacramento to qualify for Nationals. The varsity eight did not make it, but the two Yellowjacket teams finished second to the Marin Rowing Association and thus qualified to go — a first for the Berkeley program.

"We were hoping that both boats would qualify for (Sunday's) finals, but it didn't work out that way," Christiani said. "The doubles heats were scheduled about 70 minutes before the fours, but we had only about a 15-minute break."

What to do? "Our plan was to get through the (double) heat without expending too much energy," he said. "We wanted to save something for the fours, so we decided to cut the power halfway in the double race and coast. The fours are pretty much the priority for teams back East."

The Berkeley four did well in its first race, finishing fifth in 7 minutes, 21.83 seconds as Canisus took the race in 6:57.36. The double team of Bice and Katsuura finished sixth in 8:01.67, well back of winner Shipley School of Bryn Mawr (PA) which finished in 7:03.26.

Both teams went into the repechage races on Saturday afternoon, and the double team decided to cut power again, coast in the race and focus all its efforts on the four. Berkeley was fifth in 8:53.38.

"Finishing second was as good as last for the next round," Christiani said.

The four had a bad start Saturday afternoon as it wrongly anticipated the start, had to stop then start again.

"We were last in the first 500," Christiani said, "and then we started walking through the field and passed every one except for the lead boat. We didn't want to expend too much energy catching the leader — we weren't going to catch it."

The Yellowjackets did manage a second in the repechage heat, finishing in 7:00.13. Grosse Pointe South High of Michigan won in 6:56.30.

On Sunday, Berkeley officially scratched the double and was fully rested for the four final.

"It was our best race of the season," Christian said. "We fell behind early, but we were in third place at one point. They were pretty proud of their finish."

Father Judge School of Philadelphia won in 6:38.17, followed by Gross Pointe South (6:39.87), Canisus (6:44.84), Sarasota Scullers (Florida) 6:48.53 and then Berkeley (6:50.80).

The closeness of all the races, Christiani said, was indicative of the fact that Berkeley was competitive.

"It was very clear that we can compete at this level of championship regattas," he said. "They want to get back here, now that they know what it is like. Especially the Double rowers, since we kind of gave up on it to advance the four. We will return if we can advance the varsity eight."

a tall hotel. Think Pebble Beach or Spanish Bay. No skyscrapers there. Or La Quinta, Silverado. These resorts have one-story, or at the most, two-story buildings.

The new Alameda Point Golf Course will be designed to hold a major golf championship. Which brings up an interesting point of convergence. Now that the Harding Park renovation in San Francisco appears dead, there is good reason to believe that the PGA Tour might consider the new Alameda course for the Tour Championship they wanted to hold at Harding. Why not?

There already have been preliminary discussions with the USGA, to align itself with the course, much like Pumpkin Ridge did in Portland.

The possibilities are endless. San Francisco is the No. 1 tourist spot in the nation. The TV networks would certainly admire camera shots of the S.F. city skyline in the background of a championship.

Phillips designed the nine-hole course to accommodate a corporate tent village and TV crews for a tour event.

"What we're trying to do here is not just another golf course," Phillips said. "Not like the new course at Half Moon Bay, but world class."

Phillips applauded the way the city of Alameda is implementing the plan for the new course.

"You have citizens and public officials involved in every area of the project," he said. "I believe the problems with the wildlife refuge and the public access requirements could be mitigated if these people are also involved early, which the city is doing."

The design review committee will present its findings to the Alameda golf commission next Wednesday (7 p.m., City Hall). The golf course design is scheduled to be presented to Alameda Reuse and Redevelopment Authority in September.

ting drafted the first time is just sinking in with Weakley.

"For the three games after (getting drafted), I just started playing horribly," he said. "Thankfully, I got my mind back in focus. At times, it just felt surreal."

What's even more surreal to most people is the thought of playing professional baseball — especially with the New York Yankees.

Love them or hate them, there are no neutral feelings about the Yankees among baseball fans. Movies have been made — "Pride of the Yankees," "Damn Yankees," and Billy Crystal's recent HBO production, "61*," to name a few — and even the team's most ardent detractors find something special about those pinstriped uniforms.

But if Weakley does eventually go to the Yankees organization, he faces a long road to Yankee Stadium.

First, there's the position he plays. Derek Jeter, who turns 27 on June 26, looks to be the Yankees' starting shortstop for a long time to come. And as in all other organizations, there are plenty of hopefuls currently ahead of Weakley, too.

"If I got to the big leagues, the likelihood of playing for the Yankees ... they have so many good infielders in their system that I would probably get traded," said Weakley.

And if he stays with Yankees?

"I would probably move to third base or second base," Weakley predicts, "most likely second base because I'm not a big guy. And if I did end up with the Yankees, Jeter's a good guy to help make you better."

For now, though, Chris Weakley looks ahead to junior college and other experiences on the baseball field.

"I'm just going to try to get stronger in the next year," he says.

Whichever way baseball takes him, Weakley is sure to draw much interest in the coming year (or years). By simply getting drafted, he already has realized a dream few can fathom.

DIAMONDBACK Robert Lerma will undergo surgery in late July.

Lerma

■ The buddy system

When playing shortstop, Lerma's keystone partner at second base is his best friend, Tommy Garabedian-Cone, also 10. While the bigger 11-and 12-year olds on the Diamondbacks belt the ball farther, the 10-year-old buddies gracefully and charmingly form the defensive core.

"I feel so bad that Robert is going to miss the second half of the season," said Garabedian-Cone, "even though we would have been rotated onto different teams."

But together they'll enter fifth grade at Cornell Elementary School in the fall.

"Robert and Tommy have a genuine, caring friendship," said Garabedian-Cone's mother, Sarah. "They don't bicker."

After his team's win, the indefatigable Lerma packed the equipment away in a huge bag that was almost his height. But he wasn't done yet. The youngster decided it was time to run several post-game sprints around the bases, capping them with marvelous hook slides into home plate. His last of the summer.

But Christina Lerma can see the bright and even humorous side, now that the lip-reading and the often-interrupted breathing will soon be over.

"The loudness of being able to hear better might at first be a shock to him," she said. "We may have to whisper, 'Robert, it's time for dinner.' "

"I'm not afraid of my surgery," said Robert Lerma. "I know that when I wake up, my family and friends will be there for me."

Wilson heading back to KGO?

You read it here first: Well-placed Channel 7 newsroom sources are saying that lead KRON anchor Pete Wilson will be jumping from KRON to KGO-TV, the station where he originally started in the Bay Area in 1985. "It's a done deal," the KGO news source says. Wilson, for once, isn't talking. This comes right after KRON finally passed KGO at 6:00 in the May ratings sweeps, as we reported last week.

Of course, if the outspoken, lantern-jawed anchor, who appears to have gained quite a bit of weight this year (possibly from worry) does defect, it'll simplify his S.F. commute. Since Wilson's already doing a talk show on KGO Radio from 2-4 p.m., all he'll have to do is go from the third floor (radio station) to the TV station on the second floor at Disney Broadcast World at 900 Front St. No more schlepping over to KRON's studios on Van Ness. An elevator commute.

(Psst. Take the stairs, Pete.)

Wilson has worried about new KRON owner Young Broadcasting for some time — that's one big reason the anchor took the high-profile talk-show job last summer on top-rated KGO. It's called hedging your bets. And with dot-com advertising gone and other ad revenues slipping, the debt-ridden Young is cutting back costs, and Wilson's fat $600,000-plus salary is one of the Young bean counters' prime targets. I also hear that Young, which has been slashing Bay-TV payrolls and its programming, will probably sell off its ubiquitous local cable channel. Among the potential buyers I hear: Tech-TV (formerly ZDTV), which, although it's headquartered in the Bay Area, is on relatively few cable systems. Another possibility I hear is a regional all-news channel like the one they have up in Seattle and Portland — a local CNN, if you will.

Wilson's old boss, former news director Dan Rosenheim, defected from Channel 4 even before Young's takeover, moving across town and taking over the top Channel 5 news spot. Now I keep hearing rumors of how much longer Rosenheim can last, given KPIX's anemic news ratings. (One exception: Channel 5's noon newscast anchored by the capable, formerly mustachioed Ken Bastida.) But KPIX's new 4:30 p.m. newscast ended its second week with a sickly 1 share — that means only 1 percent of all TVs were tuned in. And you can't blame the day part — KRON's 4 p.m. news earlier got a 10 share of audience.

So, will Wilson, if he comes, land on KGO's 5 or 6 p.m. newscast? Most are guessing the 6, with the pleasant Jessica Aguirre. That would produce better chemistry than the current set-up: Aguirre is teamed with the also-pleasant but insipid Dan Ashley. "Move Ashley back to 5," says one broadcast-news vet, and lose annoying robo-anchor Dan "White" Noyes. I agree. But that almost makes too much sense to happen.

MEDIA NOTES: MEDIA NOTES: Speaking of anchor changes at KGO-TV, the latest is the sudden departure of Channel 7 morning co-anchor Cameron Harper, who was given his walking papers last Thursday and didn't have time to say good-bye. Harper, posessor of the most impressive silver anchor hair hereabouts, just arrived from an Arizona station a few months ago ...

We've mentioned here before that KCBS sports anchor Steve Bitker has been schlepping up to Rohnert Park for seven years from his Alameda home to do the play-by-play for Class A minor-league team the Sonoma Crushers. Bitker says if a major-league job ever opens up, he wants to be ready. Bitker gets his first chance a week from today, June 22, when he'll fill in for A's voice Bill King on the A's-Rangers broadcast. Bitker may also do the A's next two games on June 23-24 ... Another former KCBS sports anchor, Ted Robinson, besides being part of the Giants' play-by-play team, is now in his second year of handling the mike on NBC's Grand Slam tennis tournaments. Ted's a big improvement over the ousted Dick Enberg, and just worked the French Open in Paris (nice gig, Ted). Robinson will be in London in two weeks to host Wimbledon for NBC, but the Notre Dame alum has another reason to be happy these days: The Atherton resident and his wife Mary (another N.D. grad) are jazzed because their daughter Annie, just graduated from high school, is also going to Notre Dame.

Speaking of fightin' Irish, when will Channel 2 boss Kevin O'Brien yank the awful "Spin City" off the air

Let loose and shake it up

■ A former warehouse provides lots of room for live music and some of the hottest dancing anywhere

NIGHT BEAT

FAT-BOTTOMED GIRLS, you make the salsa world go 'round. At least, that was my impression at Kimball's Carnival.

We are talking big booty central. And I was so grateful, because my black micro-mini dress was really accentuating my derriere (which needs no extra attention called to it).

I wore a dress because the last time I went salsa dancing, I was the only woman in pants. I guess times have changed since then, or maybe it's just that the atmosphere at Kimball's is casual enough to allow women the choice. About half the women still wore swirly dresses, but the rest were shaking it in pants.

Perhaps the only salsa fashion trend that hasn't changed in years is the pointy, high-heeled shoes that crush toes but look sooo good. My boyfriend's brother calls them "stupid shoes." OK, they might be stupid, but they instantly transform me into a diva. A slow, hobbling diva, but a diva nonetheless.

Why should you go to Kimball's Carnival — I mean, besides going to watch big butts wiggling around on stilts? For the music and dancing.

Ladies, don't worry about who to dance with. If you have a boyfriend who doesn't dance, Kimball's offers salsa lessons from 8-9 p.m. Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. There are a lot of beginners in these classes, and even the most rhythm-impaired guy shouldn't be too self-conscious. If that makes no difference to him, there's a bar stocked with all the essentials. Liquid courage has helped many a burgeoning salsa dancer.

If you're single, don't worry — there are plenty of lone salseros waiting to twirl you around the floor — and most of them know how to lead. I also saw a couple of women dancing together, not in a lonely wallflower way, and not in a "let's turn the guys on" way — just for the sheer fun of dancing.

This brings me to the trollitos (trolls who frequent salsa clubs). Ay ay ay. Que pena! I should explain the layout of the place. As you first walk in, there's a large open area that runs the length of the bar. The listless single guys hanging out here didn't seem to have the gumption to ask anyone to dance. They weren't trolls, but they were still a little creepy.

Just past the bar are two counters that face the humongous (6,000 square feet) dance floor. Consider this area the wall of trollitos. It's where the serious scoping was going down. Actually, leering would be a better description. As I sat along this counter

Berkeley Arts Festival is June 16 to July 1

On Saturday June 16, from 1-5 p.m., flocks of musicians, from folk and pop to ethnic and avant garde, will transform downtown Shattuck Avenue into the Berkeley Arts Festival's Music Circus with street performers cavorting around a Poets Corner. So begins this year's Berkeley Arts Festival, a two week city-wide celebration of one of the country's richest and most diverse arts communities.

During the festival Carefree Carfree Tours by bus, walking or cycling will reconnect the arts and the environment, encouraging you to slow down and look around—tours by artists, musicians, poets, architects, dancers, historians, gardeners, librarians, path walkers, bus riders and cyclists. Around the town you will visit: the Shotgun Players in John Hinkel Park; the "Watershed" exhibition at the Berkeley Arts Center, Beatnik Poets Houses, Pusod Center for Culture, Ecology and Bayan, Judah L. Magnes Museum. You can select from a great variety of related tours: Berkeley Architectural Heritage, Where It All Began, Free Speech, Gardens, Creeks, Libraries...

The festival gallery and headquarters in the former Lee Frank Jewelers, 2200 Shattuck Ave. will feature an exhibition of "Outsider Art" from the Ames Gallery as well as a Festival of Local Filmmakers and on June 17, a CD release concert by pianist Sarah Cahill.

On June 29 at the Julia Morgan Center, Malcolm Margolin of Heyday Books will present "My Berkeley," brief musings of dozens of Berkeley residents. The event will be a fund raiser for the proposed David Brower Center.

Closing the Festival on July 1 and welcoming in the summer fog the Berkeley Public Library will co-sponsor a Jazz performance on the Berkeley Pier.

Festival opens with downtown music circus

After opening ceremonies at 1 p.m. on June 16, including the traditional Berkeley City Council sing-along, the Berkeley Arts Festival will transform downtown Shattuck Avenue into a lively Music Circus. A great variety of music will fill the air from University Avenue to Channing Way, coming from string quartets, jazz trios, ethnic singers, blues bands, instruments made-on-the-spot from recycled materials, and more.

DREAMWORKS

CREATURE FEATURE: "Evolution" features some nifty special effects, but some critics are saying that on the whole, the movie should be extinct.

Below are capsule reviews of movies playing at area theaters. The reviewers are Vera H-C Chan and Mary F. Pols, Times; Glenn Lovell, San Jose Mercury News; Robert W. Butler and Desmond Ryan, Knight Ridder Newspapers; Anthony Breznican, Matt Crenson, David Germain, Chris Grygiel, Christy Lemire, Sheila Norman-Culp, Malcolm Ritter, Bob Thomas and Matt Wolf, Associated Press; John Anderson, Bob Heisler and Gene Seymour, Newsday; Stephen Holden, Dave Kehr, Elvis Mitchell and A.O. Scott, New York Times; Jack Mathews, New York Daily News; Bob Strauss and Glenn Whipp, Los Angeles Daily News; Kenneth Turan and Kevin Thomas, Los Angeles Times; Henry Sheehan, Orange County Register; Mark Caro and Robert K. Elder, Chicago Tribune; Gary Dowell, Tom Sime and Chris Vognar, Dallas Morning News; and Desson Howe, Washington Post

"ALONG CAME A SPIDER": Detective and psychologist Alex Cross (Morgan Freeman) returns in this prequel to "Kiss the Girls" to subvert the grandiose visions of a kidnapper determined to hijack a place in the history books. Freeman elevates what would otherwise be a commonplace thriller, based on the book by James Patterson. As in so many of his films, he invests his role with a hybrid American Zen mastery, delivering lines like koans. Also promising are Michael Winicott as the known kidnapper and Mika Boorem as the young victim; less effective is Monica Potter as a lightweight Secret Service agent. — V. Chan. (R) 1 hour, 24 minutes. C+.

"AMORES PERROS": Any movie that starts, as this shatteringly eloquent Mexican movie does, with a disclaimer that, despite appearances, no animals were harmed during the production is probably not going to be a breeze to watch. Add to that the fact that one of the three intricately interwoven subplots revolves around dogfighting, and this Oscar-nominated film could end up the most-avoided movie of the spring. But what a shame it would be to miss something this potent because of fear. Richly novelistic, in the tradition of Kieslowski's "Three Colors" trilogy, this is one no true movie buff can miss. — M. Pols. (R: language, violence and sexuality.) 2 hours, 33 minutes. A

"ANGEL EYES": Slightly pretentious but enjoyable romance, with Jennifer Lopez doing a fine job in the role of Sharon, a tough Chicago cop who falls in love with Catch, a rather weird man of mystery (Jim Caviezel). It's been billed as supernatural thriller, but it's not that at all. Both these characters have very real problems. Sharon comes from a family where domestic violence is the norm, Catch suffered terrible losses in a recent automobile accident. He's a bit unbelievable, but watching these two find their way together is much more pleasant than the trailers would lead us to believe. — M. Pols. (R: language, violence and a scene of sexuality.) 1 hour, 44 minutes. B-

"THE ANIMAL": It's no surprise that this comedy starring Rob Schneider as a man who receives animal transplants and starts acting like barnyard critters comes from Adam Sandler's production team. Like "Deuce Bigalow," the comedy is crude and rude as Schneider starts whinnying and galloping. The preview audience lapped it up, but the film is grade-Z stuff. — C. Lemire. (PG-13: some crude and sexual humor.) 1 hour, 23 minutes. D

"BIG EDEN": Perhaps the first movie in history to feature a bunch of straight Montana cowboys sitting around sincerely fretting over the love lives of a trio of men. In Big Eden, Montana, tolerance knows no bounds. Even your gruff old grandpa wishes you'd just hurry up and come out of the closet. Arye Gross plays painter Henry Hart, the closeted guy who returns home from New York to care for his ailing grandpa and finds himself in an unlikely love triangle with an antisocial grocery store owner and the former star of the high-school football team. Big Eden itself is altogether too precious, and the film is often very amateurish, but there is some sweet stuff in here. — M. Pols. (PG-13 for some mature thematic material.) 1 hour, 57 minutes. C+

"BRIDGET JONES'S DIARY": To play the romantically challenged British singleton in this adaptation of Helen Fielding's hilarious best-selling novel, Renee Zellweger put on the pounds. She's gloriously puffy-faced, she chain-smokes, she's foul-mouthed, and yet completely endearing. Her search for love includes dalliances with the office scoundrel, Daniel (Hugh Grant, playing the ultimate cad) and Mark Darcy (Colin Firth), who is both haughty and desperately attractive. Lightweight fare, but pure entertainment. — M. Pols. (R: language and some strong sexuality.) 1 hour, 35 minutes. A-

"CROUCHING TIGER, HIDDEN DRAGON": Don't be scared off by the subtitles or the martial-arts sequences. Director Ang Lee's Chinese-language film is absolutely heavenly, the most exhilarating movie of the year. It has all the elements of a great epic. It's an adventure film, with two love stories, one passionate and one more sedate, pushing the action across gorgeous landscapes. The martial arts scenes are choreographed by the master himself, Yeun Wo-Ping, and they will make your mouth drop. With a pair of women warriors (Michelle Yeoh, Zhang Ziyi) who make Buffy the Vampire Slayer seem like a beginner. — M. Pols. (R: martial arts violence and some sexuality.) 1 hour, 59 minutes. A

"THE DEBUT": The best way to describe San Jose native Gene Cajayon's film is crowd-pleasing. The title is taken from the 18th birthday and coming-out celebration of Rose Mercado (Bernadette Balagtas), who narratively would been more intriguing, but the focus is on brother Ben (Pittsburg native Dante Basco), who has long shunned Filipino traditions in favor of his (white) friends and his animation artwork. The freshman directorial effort is at best earnest and often amateurish with derivative writing and hackneyed scenarios, but it is a first in Filipino-American cinema. — V. Chan. (NR) 1 hour, 34 minutes. C+

"EVOLUTION": Don't be fooled by the previews — this new comedy/sci-fi hybrid that rips off "Jurassic Park" and "Ghostbusters" is a lazy lampoon. Two teachers (David Duchovny and Orlando Jones) find two E.T. amoebas that metamorph into all sorts of critters. Julianne Moore is on hand as a klutzy government scientist. What saves the movie from being a total disaster is Duchovny's goofy performance; he almost makes you forget that "Tremors" did this sort of stuff better. — G. Lovell (PG-13: crude and sexual humor and sci-fi action.) 1 hour, 43 minutes. D

"THE GOLDEN BOWL": This adaptation of Henry James' most notoriously difficult novel is not awful, but hardly up to producer-director team Ismail Merchant and James Ivory's customary standards. It's 1903. American billionaire Adam Verver and his daughter Maggie live happily in Europe, collecting art, until Maggie meets and marries an impoverished Italian prince (Jeremy Northam). To even the symmetry, Adam marries Charlotte, an equally impoverished school friend of Maggie's, who, unbeknownst to Maggie, was once the prince's lover. The bad news for all is that she still wants the prince. In a big way. As Charlotte, Uma Thurman poses the film's biggest problem. She flaps around like Big Bird, agitated one minute, preening seductress the next. — M. Pols. (R: for one sex scene.) 2 hours, 7 minutes. C+

"HAUNTED CASTLE": This 3D IMAX film promises horror and delivers it in an unintended way. The film, which follows the brief adventure of a budding rock singer, makes the special effects the real star, and some of these are quite good. But a film needs to commit itself to more than merely presenting shiny rotating, 3D objects for our distraction. Either "Haunted Castle" should have gone straight for the adult jugular and rating, or spent a smidgen more time making the special effects actually do something other than look pretty. — V. Chan. (PG: creepy images.) 40 minutes. D

"KEEP THE RIVER ON THE RIGHT: A MODERN CANNIBAL TALE": On paper, this fascinating documentary sounds almost too bizarre to be real. A brother/sister team of directors David and Laurie Gwen Shapiro, tell the story of Tobias Schneebaum, a 78-year-old gay New Yorker who is an artist, an anthropologist, a cruise ship lecturer and a former cannibal. With the filmmakers in tow, Schneebaum revisits first the jungles of Indonesia, where he lived with a tribe of headhunters in the early 1970s, and then the jungles of Peru, where he lived for a year with cannibals. Sounds like "Heart of Darkness" rewritten by Edmund White. But as off-putting as that may be, Schneebaum is immediately captivating, and so is his story. — M. Pols. (R: depiction of mature thematic material.) 1 hour, 33 minutes. B

"THE KING IS ALIVE": Forget "Survivor"; this work of fiction provides a far more believable and revealing peek at human nature. Eleven people are trapped in the Sahara after their bus breaks down. All they've got to eat are canned carrots. Sitting around hoping to be rescued, they have nothing to do but rifle each other's psyches and/or pants. So they stage their own version of Shakespeare's "King Lear." It's both depressing and fascinating to watch them unravel. Director Kristian Levring, one of the original founders of the Dogma 95 movement, gets great performances from Jennifer Jason Leigh, Bruce Davison, Janet McTeer and newcomer Lia Williams. — M. Pols. (R: sexuality and language.) 1 hour, 48 minutes. A-

"A KNIGHT'S TALE": With its combination of pop music, blatant historical inaccuracies and feel-good Rocky-esque underpinnings, this action movie with a medieval setting is supremely, but also joyfully, creative. It's as audacious as its young hero, William Thatcher (Heath Ledger). William is the son of a poor man, so jousting, a nobleman's sport, is off-limits to him, but he wants in anyway. When an accident gives him a chance, he triumphs and begins winning joust after joust. He's accompanied by a merry band of commoners, and eventually loved by a beautiful noblewoman (Shannyn Sossamon, who can't act, but fulfills her beauty requirements). — M. Pols. (PG-13: action violence, some nudity and brief sex-related dialogue.) 2 hours, 12 minute. B

"THE MAN WHO CRIED": A beautifully shot but strangely stagnant movie from director Sally Potter ("Orlando"), set in Paris right before the Nazi occupation. Christina Ricci stars as Susie, a young Russian Jew who became separated from her cantor father at a very early age and is now living essentially undercover as an English singer. Working in the Paris theater community, she meets a Russian dancer (Cate Blanchett, overacting) and an egotistical Italian opera singer (John Turturro, overacting more). She also finds love with a handsome Gypsy horse-handler (Johnny Depp). What saves this movie is the touching story surrounding Susie's quest to find her father. — M. Pols. (R: sexuality.) 1 hour, 37 minutes. C+

"MEMENTO": Christopher Nolan's thriller is told backward in roughly 10-minute increments, which has made it buzz central among the spring releases. But even after two viewings, "Memento" comes off more as a clever gag than a piece of wildly innovative filmmaking. It's set up to reward the sharp-eyed viewer: Figure out what's going on and pat yourself on the back for being in the same intellectual stratosphere as the filmmaker. Still, Guy Pearce couldn't be better as Leonard, a former insurance claims investigator who's on a mission to find his wife's killer, but is hampered by having no short-term memory. — M. Pols. (R: violence, drug content and some language.) 1 hour, 53 minutes. ■

"MOULIN ROUGE": Director Baz Luhrmann's relentless musical drama exudes so much energy that it throws up what amounts to a nearly impenetrable force field around itself. There's certainly something endearing about how much effort he and his co-stars, Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor, playing star-crossed lovers in turn-of-the-century Paris, have put into trying to woo us. Kidman is spectacular; she's pure courage. But despite flashes of true creativity, some inspired musical choices and a consistently startling opulence, the movie fails. It's just too much: gaping mouths, flailing limbs, wildly intercut scenes that make it impossible to focus. Luhrmann is in such a hurry to show us everything in his toy chest that there isn't time to savor anything. — M. Pols. (PG-13: sexuality.) 2 hours. B-

"THE MUMMY RETURNS": Like its 1999 predecessor, it's virtually guaranteed to be a blockbuster, but this is a tiresome movie: confusing, loud, violent and so bloated with special effects that you want to crawl into a dark hole when it finally draws to a close. The action picks up in 1933, about nine years after librarian Evelyn (Rachel Weisz) and explorer Rick (Brendan Fraser) first got together. They're married now and have a son, Alex (Freddie Boath). They'd be living happily ever after if someone hadn't woken up the mummy again, as well as an even more powerful character named the Scorpion King. Many of the special effects look too fake to be believed, and the plot is incomprehensible nonsense. — M. Pols. (PG-13) 2 hours, 1 minute. C-

"PEARL HARBOR": A meatloaf sandwich on Wonder Bread: meaty action on the inside, surrounded by insubstantial, banal romantic material. Director Michael Bay does succeed in his 40-minute re-creation of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, but he shows his limitations everywhere else. The romance between Kate Beckinsale's nurse and her two flyboys, Josh Hartnett and Ben Affleck, does little to stir the senses. The dialogue is horrendous, of the "You're so beautiful it hurts" variety, and the acting is all about posing. Excessively loud and shot exclusively in golden light only, as if Bay had ordered up 24 hours of sunsets for his movie. Exhausting. — M. Pols. (R: language, violence and a scene of sexuality.) 3 hours, 3 minutes. C-

"THE ROAD HOME": A sweet and lengthy Kodak commercial, set in present-day China in a remote village. A young businessman returns home from the city for his father's funeral, and discovers that his mother is insisting that the body be transported by foot to the funeral, a trek that will take two days. In a lengthy flashback, the young man recounts the story of his parents' courtship, which helps him better understand her demand. Beautifully shot, but suffers from too much sentimentality. And if you're going to see the dynamic young actress Zhang Ziyi, of "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" fame, don't expect much. Like the film, she mostly just looks pretty. — M. Pols. (G) 1 hour, 39 minutes. B-

"SHREK": An animated visual marvel, with all the beauty and realism of a Chris Van Allsburg children's book. Shrek (voiced by Mike Myers) is an insecure ogre, who makes a deal with evil Lord Farquaad (John Lithgow) to procure him a bride. Accompanied by a hilarious donkey (Eddie Murphy at his best), Shrek goes to rescue Princess Fiona (Cameron Diaz) from a dragon-guarded tower on high, and unexpectedly finds love. Plenty of bathroom humor (perhaps too much) for the kids, with some clever, more sophisticated stuff for parents. — M. Pols. (PG: mild language and some crude humor.) 1 hour, 27 minutes. B+

"STARTUP.COM": A riveting and tragic tale of two childhood friends who shared a dream of Internet success, saw their star rise and then watched it plummet even faster. The story has inherent human drama. And in the sure hands of co-director Chris Hegedus and her husband/producer, D.A. Pennebaker, they've created a poignant, insightful snapshot of our times, a personal look of our times, economy and society. — C. Lemire. (R: language.) 1 hour, 43 minutes. B+

"SWORDFISH": Boldly illogical and notable mostly for the brief appearance of Halle Berry's breasts. John Travolta plays a super-spy named Gabriel, who is cooking up a nefarious plan to steal government money to fund his anti-terrorist campaign. Hugh Jackman plays the computer hacker Gabriel hires to break into the federal computers, and he's pure movie star. Too bad about the movie; there's absolutely no logic to the plot. For instance, all this computer stuff should be a fairly quiet enterprise, but with Joel Silver producing, somehow a bank takeover, a hostage situation and a massive car chase involving an airborne bus are jammed into the story. — M. Pols. (R: violence, language and some sexuality/nudity.) 1 hour, 57 minutes. C

"UNDER THE SAND": This tale of grief is worth seeing for Charlotte Rampling's rich performance as Marie, a woman whose husband disappears one summer day on the beach. Everyone else assumes he's dead, drowned, but Marie can't face up to it. She continues to live as if Jean is with her, talking to him, asking him to hold her at night. Like "Blue" in the way it captures the grief of sudden loss. Rampling is good enough to make you start to question Jean's death as well. Could he have just run away, taken a leave of absence from their lives? A deliberately and gracefully ambiguous movie. Quiet, though; don't expect fireworks. — M. Pols (NR) 1 hour, 35 minutes. B+

"WHAT'S THE WORST THAT COULD HAPPEN?": Could Martin Lawrence's foundation makeup overdose be what's weighing down this torpid snoozer? Lawrence is a burglar who gets tangled in a war of one-upmanship with a media mogul (Danny DeVito). There are moments, and clever cinematography, but subdued pacing, halfhearted tacky jokes and a shameful lack of good lines squander an otherwise promising story, based on a book by Donald Westlake. Eccentric characters are shoehorned in here, from the streetwise uncle who would cheat his own blood (Bernie Mac) to the faithful secretary who reads I Ching coins (Glenne Headly); still, this is no "What's Up, Doc?" or even "Ruthless People," despite DeVito's presence. The liveliest performance hands down comes from William Fichtner as extravagantly flamboyant Boston police detective Alex Tardio, who strikes serious poses and emanates equal-opportunity sexuality. — V. Chan. (PG-13: language and sexual content.) 1 hour, 35 minutes. C with my boyfriend (who refused to dance or drink), I noticed that the ones to really watch out for were wearing three-piece suits, shirts buttoned all the way up and no ties. I'm not sure why this was the troll costume of choice that night. Maybe they have a guild with a dress code.

These guys were tenacious. After they had checked out where the single women were seated around the dance floor, they asked each of them to dance until they got a yes.

I don't want to give the impression that Kimball's Carnival is only a troll den. Most men seemed to be there just because they love to salsa. And many of the people seemed to be couples, happy to strut with and for each other. Some of these couples took the strutting a little too far — for some people, there's a fine line between dancing and exhibitionism. A woman in half-splits on the floor while her partner fluttered in circles around her nearly made me leave, but drove me to drink instead. I'm glad I stayed. The atmosphere was enough to make me want to check the place out more, even if the kamikazes were mediocre and expensive ($6.50 for generic vodka).

Original paintings on enormous canvases are hung along the length of the walls, with hot pink spotlights trained on them. They depict carnival queens, a flapper, a zoot suit-wearing bandito and so on. My personal favorite was the salsa-dancing Zorro.

The bar is decorated in typical Caribbean art-deco colors — peach, turquoise, yellow and brown — painted in long triangular patterns. Dozens of booths are upholstered in these colors, and the whole place buzzes with a rich, tropical warmth.

Kimball's was converted from a warehouse and still has a ceiling reminiscent of an airplane hangar, only now it's augmented with a small disco ball at each corner of the dance floor and a giant one right in the middle. The acoustics weren't great, but not terrible. And the stage was big enough to easily fit the 10-piece band that sounded good in spite of whatever the sound system might have lacked.

Kimball's Carnival is casual, even if there is a prowl scene. Don't let that keep you away from the lively music and huge dance floor. It's a good place to shake your butt, no matter how big or small it might be.

The Berkeley Public Library is staging a Poets Corner in the shadow of the yet- to-be completed Main Library and street performers will stroll the Avenue. A Pedi-Cab will offer free rides to and from the Farmers' Market and a Dixieland Band on a pick-up truck will provide accompaniment.

For most of the day musicians will be on their own wavelengths, but at an appointed hour they will play in unison to a signal coming from radio station KPFA.

Free bus fare for the afternoon to and from Downtown is being offered by ACTransit to encourage ridership and relieve congestion. Passes will be distributed from the Arts Festival Gallery at 2200 Shattuck Avenue or at bookstores.

Carefree/Carfree Tours.

The Carefree/Carfree artful garden tour meets at 1 p.m. on Saturday June 24 at 2200 Shattuck Ave. at Allston Way. Ride AC Transit bus to Marcia Donohue and Mark Bulwinkle's our Own Stuff Garden & Gallery, a trip to the unexpected at every turn. Then walk over to Dry Garden for a tour conducted by owner, Richard Ward.

A second Carefree/Carfree tour meets at 1:30 p.m. on June 24 at 2200 Shattuck Ave. at Allston Way. Ride AC Transit with Steve Geller of the Bus Riders' Union to Richard Register's Codornices Creek Restoration Project. Then it's on to the Peralta Community Garden to view the garden and art as well as a concert by composer Nicole Miller.

"Jazz on the Pier" is a new venue for jazz with the Bay as the backdrop. The Christy Dana Quartet featuring Mark Levine on piano, Bill Douglass on bass and Scott Morris on drums performs on the Berkeley Pier, at the foot of University Avenue and Seawall Drive, for a free concert on Sunday, July 1, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The CDQ, an ensemble led by trumpeter and jazz educator Christy Dana, appears in a joint production by the Berkeley Arts Festival, the Berkeley Public Library and the Friends of the Berkeley Public Library on the closing day of the two-week festival. Bring your folding chairs, coffee, sunblock and jackets and soak up jazz standards and fresh originals.

Starry Plough hosts brass band blowout

Ed Ivey's Brass Band Blowout, featuring Polkacide, Brass Monkey Brass Band and Banda La Bahia, comes to the Starry Plough, 3101 Shattuck Ave. in Berkeley, on Saturday June 23. Tickets: $6 at the door 21-over. Show starts at 9:30 p.m.

Headlining the show is Polkacide, San Francisco's legendary oompah-with-spikes polka band. Polkacide was one of the area's earliest standouts during the seminal early '80s punk rock era. Since the days of Mabuhay Gardens, the Farm and Ruthie's Inn, Polkacide has never stopped doing one thing – playing hard-edged polka for polka pals everywhere.

Playing the middle set will be Brass Monkey Brass Band, playing the best of the New Orleans sound and a plentiful set of original jazz-funk tunes.

Opening is Banda La Bahia, an Oakland-based 15-piece banda sinaloense playing traditional southern Mexican brass band music.

– or at least cut it back to once a night? The dimbulb sitcom's ratings aren't helping those of "Seinfeld," which it surrounds ... If you want to take a leisurely stroll with the classiest guy in local broadcasting, plan on taking part in the charity three-mile Walk for ALS Sunday, June 24, at 9 a.m. at Lake Merritt. The genial Hart's calling it "The Rally for Sally," after his wife, who has ALS, aka Lou Gehrig's Disease (see Martin Snapp's column on page A9 for more) ... One Chronicle headline writer wanted to use the head "Enter The Dragon" last Sunday after exec editor Phil Bronstein's bizarre run-in with a Komodo dragon at the L.A. Zoo, but thought better of it. Speaking of the Chron, has anyone else noticed that its new vanity TV ads featuring all those fresh-scrubbed Yupsters/out-of-work dot-commies look remarkably like those that plugged the Sunday New York Times last year? ...

KQED-TV will team up with three other major PBS California affiliates to do a weeknight news show, "California Connected," starting early next year. "Connected" will be produced by former "60 Minutes" staffer Marley Klaus. The show, which will reach 80 percent of this state's viewers, will originate at L.A.'s PBS affiliate, KCET-TV. On the radio side, KQED-FM has produced a similar show, "The California Report," the past five years ... Speaking of KQED, the highest-rated NPR affiliate in the country, I recently had the privilege of appearing as a guest on Michael Krasny's "Forum" with two TV heroes — "Sopranos" writers/co-exec producers Robin Green and Mitchell Burgess. The pair also wrote CBS's "Northern Exposure" together. Green says of the critically acclaimed HBO series, "It's amazing to see what you write come out exactly right on screen. The actors are incredible — they all get it. The only people censoring us are ourselves. We're writing full-throttle. It's the most fun we've ever had as writers." ... Free-plug dept.: Not only do I have possibly the world's largest collection of Canadian jokes posted at my Web site — www.mannaboutsf.com — but starting next week, I'm reviving my comprehensive weekly report on Bay Area radio which I wrote for now-defunct East Bay-based dot-com Radio Digest until earlier this year. Check it out.

One of the best reasons to rent — or buy — a DVD is, of course, supplemental material on it. We've mentioned all the extra goodies you get on the "Spinal Tap" DVD, but since this group of heavy-metal parodists just appeared this week at S.F.'s Warfield Theater on tour ("We Play Live AND Loud," Tap's Web page says), it seems a good time to mention the funny disc again. According to news reports, when the band recently opened the mini-tour at Carnegie Hall, dimbulb guitarist Nigel Tufnel (Christoper Guest, the guy whose amplifiers' volume knobs go to "11" instead of "10") opened the show by proclaiming: "Dale Carnegie is spinning in his grave!" Hey, dude, that's no way to win friends.

We're celebrating our 126th anniversary, but the big gift is for you: Free checking for the next 126 years! That means no more monthly service charges, and no minimum balance requirements, either. When you think about how much money this will save you, you'll be celebrating too.

You'll also get our CheckScan® Statement. It's an incredibly easy way to keep track of all those checks you'll be writing from now till 2127. Every month you'll get sharp, little pictures of your processed checks–10 per page, arranged in numerical order, printed on pages already 3-hole punched for easy filing. It's all the information you need, without all the handling and storage hassles of canceled checks.

If you don't already have a Bank of the West checking account, now is the ideal time to get one that's free for the next 126 years. All it takes is a $100 opening deposit. Just stop by your nearest Bank of the West office. But please come in before June 22, 2001. Because even though our free checking goes on for the next 126 years, this offer can't.

Get Your Darning Needles Out to Make a Real French Dressing

Summer is upon us, and with it comes lighter days, lighter clothing and lighter eating habits. Fruits and vegetables abound and salads of all kinds are available for lunch and dinner entrees. California cooks with their innovative styles add clumps of chevre cheese, honey roasted nuts, slices of fresh fruit or dried cranberries to the standard salad fare. Dressings, oil and vinegar or cream based, are the all-important final touch to creating that special salad.

Looking back to its first edition 58 years ago, Gourmet Magazine Editor Ruth Reichl recalls in this June's edition the recipe for "a real French dressing." It called for putting "half a standard cup of vinegar into a quart bottle with 2½ generous tablespoons of salt, 1 of dry mustard (optional), and 1½ teaspoons of pepper. Now, with a darning needle, string a clove of garlic on a long thread, drop the garlic into the vinegar and let the end of the thread dangle outside. Cork the bottle and let it stand for a week, shaking daily. At the end of that time, fish the garlic out and fill the bottle about three quarters full of good olive oil. Shake thoroughly and taste. Add more of any ingredient according to taste."

That same issue admonished readers that "each (lettuce) leaf must be individually sponged dry with a clean towel" and that the salad itself "must be continuously tossed for at least five minutes in an oversized bowl."

So get out your darning needle and toss up a great salad!

Women's lifetime of music and inspiration justly honored

CLARA-RAE GENSER
Community Folk

I went to a prayer breakfast Saturday, at the Resurrection African Methodist Episcopal Church in Richmond. And a beautiful event it was. I went, crossing religious lines, because they were honoring three very deserving women, one of whom was my longtime friend, Callie Greer.

Callie was being honored because of her years of leadership and inspiration in music. And it was in music that our paths crossed so often through the years.

Many years ago, when we were all very young, a young man came to Richmond to begin his musical career. He was extremely talented and energetic, and he had soon started a gospel choir. Although I was not of their faith, he asked me to be part of it because I could reach those very high notes he needed. And I did, and it was such fun to sing that beautiful and exciting music.

Our accompanist was Callie Greer, another most talented musician. She could do anything he asked of her on the piano. And he asked a great deal. With so much talent and enthusiasm, our little gospel choir was soon singing everywhere. Until he had to leave to go on to better things, I was singing with that wonderful choir, while also singing in our own choir at our temple. Such fun.

Later Callie's daughter, Ellen, became a counselor at the interracial, intercultural day camp our temple held for several summers in the Richmond area. One of Ellen's charges was my younger daughter, Mori, who adored her counselor. And Sandi, who was a junior counselor, worked closely with Ellen and grew to love her, also. Ellen Greer is now Ellen Posey and a long time principal in Oakland high schools.

Although we met casually through the years, it was when Callie came to sing with the Berkeley Women's Chorus that we really came to know each other again. So great was her talent and musical ability that when our director had to leave we asked Callie to take over the leadership of our chorus. And she has been our beloved and inspired director ever since. Callie tells us we can sing anything, so we do. She leads us as we sing for rest homes, hospitals, churches, even schools (that was the year when we sang a group of animal songs that were so cute we sang them for elementary school children in El Cerrito and Richmond.)

Callie Juanita Greer is a native of Kilgore, Texas, and attended Prairie View College prior to moving to Richmond in 1945 with her late husband, Leon Greer Sr. Shortly after arriving in California she enrolled in UC Berkeley to continue her studies in music, but gave them up to become mother and housewife.

She studied the piano through a correspondence course from the Kansas City School of Music. At the young age of 10, after studying the piano for one year, she became the church musician at Mt. Calvary Baptist Church in Kilgore, Texas.

With this fine background, it was not surprising that in 1948 she became director of the Church Music Program of the Davis Chapel CME in Richmond. She continued in this capacity for 40 musical years. During this time she brought our Berkeley Women's Chorus to sing for and with the choir of Davis Chapel. That was so enjoyable. She also had us sing for the annual meeting of the NAACP. (As I said, she was an inspired leader).

Callie spent ten years in a Music Ministry at Phillips Temple, CME Church in Berkeley, but recently returned to Davis Chapel

To quote from the Prayer Breakfast booklet, "A gifted and talented Teacher, Conductor and Pianist, Mrs. Greer has taught piano and organ lessons to thousands of children and adults for over fifty-five years. She founded the Greer School of Music, and continues to teach. Mrs. Greer uses the proceeds from the Recital Souvenir Booklet and other donations to provide scholarships to student graduates.

"She is Pianist for the Richmond Chapter of United Church Women, an organization is women of different denominations who provide help for the needy. And until recently, Callie volunteered three days a week to tutor and teach reading to inmates at the County Jail. She also started a choir in the jail.

"A reporter for the West County Times stated, 'Callie Greer has helped a lot of people realize their musical and personal potential.' Many of her students have become church musicians, while others have gone on to distinguish themselves in the jazz and pop music field.

"Mrs. Greer has received many awards and much recognition from the City of Richmond, Congressman George Miller, Assemblyman Bob Campbell and Senator Dan Boatwright. She continues to be an inspiration to her present and former students, her church family, her relatives and her children, Ellen Posey and Leon, Jr."

And I can attest that all the recognition of this modest, talented and giving woman is well deserved.

Also honored at the breakfast were Anna Blackman, longtime educator and administrator in the West Contra Costa schools, and Doris Denson-Belcher, wife of their pastor (Richmond City Councilman Charles Belcher), and president of the NAACP.

I enjoyed the beautiful ceremony at the Resurrection Church, which is only two years old. The prayer breakfast was part of their fund raising for the new church they hope to build. A happy, enthusiastic congregation, I am sure they will make their goal. Please continue giving me your ideas and interesting people. Classic Classics 1965 Ford Falcon Sprint: easy to find, hard to drive home [D2]

RAY NORTON
My Favorite Car

Sing the praises of the mighty Hudson

My favorite car was a 1953 Hudson Super Wasp my dad brought home from a junkyard in 1968 when I was 17. The car ran OK. It had lived its life on the East Coast and had badly rotted in many places.

We proceeded to tune the car up, rebuild the two carburetors and put the car back into decent mechanical shape. The 308-cubic-inch flat six-cylinder was still very strong despite some coolant leaking from a cracked head. The previous owner fixed this with JB Weld. Very ugly, but it seemed to do the job.

With over 100,000 miles it burned (and leaked) a quart of oil every tank of gas. This was the era of muscle cars and a few of the guys graduating high school were purchasing 396 Chevelles and '65 GTOs. We had a section of highway (The Highway To Nowhere) that was built to connect two major highways.

The state ran out of money and this four-mile-long, three-lane highway lay unused for several years. Of course, the local cruisers confiscated it for impromptu racing. I was rather embarrassed by the old Hudson, but it was a case of "Love me one you're with."

I raced the Hudson against friends' cars and always managed to win. Encouraged by this, my dad and I decided to drive the car to Connecticut Drag. At this time, the drags were all-class oriented rather than the bracket racing of today. The Hudson weighed well over 5,000 pounds. It had an advertised

MITSUBISHI'S 2002 LANCER comes with either a five-speed manual or four-speed automatic transmission.

Mitsubishi introduces all-new 2002 Lancer sedan

CONNIE KEANE
Keane on Wheels

Mitsubishi's motorsport Lancer has a long history of world rally championship titles. Entering the United States for the first time, Lancer comes with a blueprint of rally-heritage DNA.

This sporty compact sedan is more than a replacement for the phased-out 1.8-liter, subcompact Mirage. The 2002 Lancer raises the standards for small cars.

Lancer comes in three models: the very well-equipped base ES, the mid-level LS, and the high-style O-Z Rally edition. All three trim levels — ranging from $14,000 to $18,000 — are powered by the same efficient powerplant. The 16-valve, 2.0-liter four-cylinder engine delivers 120 horsepower and 130 ib.-ft. of torque.

I test-drove both the five-speed manual and the four-speed automatic transmissions. Though I prefer the manual for its fun and easy shifting qualities, the automatic performed much better than I was expecting. I didn't detect the Lancer's automatic transmission "hunting" for gears, a common occurance with small cars. And the response out of first gear when the gas pedal was applied was smooth and instantaneous — no dull, lazy start from this automatic.

It's an accomplishment that the interior design team could make the Lancer look larger on the inside than it actually is. A good start comes from the cab-forward design, a high roofline, and a 102-inch wheelbase, all of which provide great visibility and a feeling of openness in the cabin. The fabric pattern on the seating area — beige with checkered gold-tone inserts — is one of the best new designs I've seen in a long time. Combined with the light-colored dashboard and door paneling with fake wood insets, the Lancer offers an inviting atmosphere.

The steering wheel is built to a "just right" circumference for a small car, and the angled protrusion of the dashboard layout benefits the ease of reaching for climate and audio controls. My test-drive model, the ES, comes with a four-speaker AM/FM/CD system; however, I recommend upgrading to the six-speaker audio system, since the FM band sometimes sounds like it's broadcasting out of a tin can.

Back seat passengers are comfortably provided for in a number of key areas, starting with a wide rear door for ease of entry and exit. Leg-, hip- and headroom are plentiful, and a convenient center pull-down armrest in the seatback houses two cupholders. The Lancer shortchanges rear-seat occupants with

Easy to find 1965 Falcon on Web; hard to get home

MOTOR MATTERS

FORD'S FALCON FUTURA SPRINT is powered by a 289-cubic-inch V-8 capped with a two-barrel carburetor.

VERN PARKER
Classic Classics

Despite the shaky start Phil Boyer had with Ford Falcons, he persevered until today when he can correctly be classified as a Falcon fanatic. He bought his starter Falcon, a 1965 model, in 1975. "I paid $200 for it," Boyer remembers.

In 1981, Phil Boyer had married and was moving his possessions into an apartment with his bride, Debbie. When the last load had been emptied from the car and trundled into their apartment, the newlywed went back outside to discover his Falcon had been stolen.

Fortunately, the police found it later that same day, but the car was never the same, so Boyer sold it after a year. Nevertheless, he was unable to get over that 1965 Falcon.

Seventeen years later, he decided he needed another Falcon and bought a two-door sedan. It was in so-so condition, but he took it home and work began.

A couple of months went by. One June evening in 1998 Boyer was surfing the Web. It was a Monday night when he checked out one auto-related Web site at 9 o'clock and, not finding anything of interest, went on to other sites.

For some unexplained reason at 9:15 he checked back with the first Web site he had visited 15 minutes earlier. This time he found a 1965 Ford Falcon Futura Sprint being offered. "It wasn't there at 9, and at 9:15 it popped up!" an incredulous Boyer exclaimed.

The car was a two-door hardtop residing in Austin, Texas. Fifteen minutes later, at 9:30 p.m., Boyer was on the horn to the Lone Star State. After a brief chat with the owner, Boyer concluded the Falcon sounded like his dream car. By 10 p.m. that same night, Boyer had tickets on a Southwest Airlines flight leaving in 8 hours. Upon arrival, he was met at the airport by the Falcon owner who had not expected such a rapid response. The car was not totally assembled when Boyer first saw it at 1 p.m., but he was impressed with what he saw. Boyer and the owner worked together to make the car roadworthy.

Ten hours later, Boyer fired up the Falcon and, though running low on sleep, he headed for his Maryland home, 1,700 miles away. Along the way, he broke down in Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee. On a rainy Wednesday, while approaching Nashville, Tenn., he had to stop every few miles and repeatedly disconnect the fuel line and suck on it to get the fuel flowing again.

In North Carolina Boyer took a break from the rigors of the trip at his father's home. The new owner of the 1965 Falcon needed a respite since his odyssey had included a chewed up tire (at 4:30 a.m.), overtightened lug nuts, a failed automatic transmission main seal, and a leaking fuel pump. After recharging his personal batteries, Boyer pressed on for home.

His wife could hardly believe her eyes. The first thing her husband did after the arduous trip was to get the hose and bucket and wash his newly acquired Falcon.

When cleaned and polished, the "Vintage Burgundy" Sprint was highlighted by the spear on the sides of "Wimbledon White." Boyer discovered that Ford had manufactured just 2,806 Falcon Sprint models like his. Each one carried a base price of $2,337. Additionally, he learned that his car was built in Los Angeles on Jan. 12, 1965, and left the factory with a manual transmission.

The exact details are sketchy, but Boyer believes that after the 1965 Falcon left California, it was taken to Mississippi before the man who sold it to him took it to Texas. There it stayed for 11 years.

Somewhere along the line, the original transmission had been substituted with an automatic. He has since reinstalled a manual transmission.

Boyer's Falcon Sprint is powered by a healthy 289-cubic-inch V-8 capped with a two-barrel carburetor. Power is controlled by a four-speed manual floor shift set in a console. The 2,749-pound weight is spread across the 15-foot, 10-inch length of the car supported on a 109.5-inch wheelbase.

Since Boyer has had his Falcon Sprint, he has steadily worked on returning the car to the condition it was in when it was new. All the brightwork has either been replated, repolished or replaced. All the windows have been removed in order to replace gaskets and seals. The aluminum grille wasn't in bad shape, but Boyer found a better one at a Pennsylvania swap meet. Because the original fake wire wheel covers needed attention, he found four in Washington state and another pair in Maryland.

Since the Falcon Sprint has arrived at its current condition, Boyer has driven it to shows in Connecticut and North Carolina. On such trips he keeps an eye on the 120-mph speedometer. "It'll do that," he said, "but it's bouncing with these shocks and springs."

storage capacity; there are no map pockets on the doors or seatbacks.

Only the driver and front-seat passenger have limited stowage with small door bins and an itsy-bitsy center console box.

The Mitsubishi safety engineering team came up with a system called RISE, which stands for Refined Impact Safety Evolution.

Structural designs to Lancer's body include energy-absorbing front and rear crumple zones, added cross members to the passenger cage, reinforced A-pillars, and beefed up side-impact structures to help divert collision forces to the front, offset front, side and rear of the vehicle.

The Lancer has three-point seat belts for all five occupants, standard dual front airbags, optional side airbags on the LS, and repositioned front head restraints.

The repositioned head restraint (head rest) is angled closer to the head, a position which gave me shoulder knots and a stiff neck.

I couldn't get comfortable with this object breathing down my neck, so I finally achieved relief by slightly reclining the seatback.

The Lancer overcomes small flaws with its enjoyable ride and handling, interior comfort, and smart pricing.

horsepower of 125. Thus, it qualified for P-stock (the only one in its class).

The Hudson received very large head starts as a result. It was not a flash off the line, but once it hit second gear, the 308 Super Wasp took off!

At the end of the track, it would eventually stop. It had really poor brakes for a car of this size. I would have to jump out, open the hood, and spray the engine down due to overheating.

The resulting cloud of smoke was very ominous, but usually no harm done. This came from leaking coolant, leaking oil and the ice in the coffee can that I had coiled the fuel line into to prevent vapor lock.

Imagine the competitors consternation when he reached the finish line to see this hulking flat black beast belching multitudes of smoke that had just blown off his new muscle car! Needless to say, they would come over in the pits and ask "What's in that thing!"

When they saw the poor old flat six, they would be very angry. The first week out, the Hudson went to the final round where it was finally caught a few feet from the finish by a professionally prepared 426 Hemi Polara. Subsequent weeks would always find it in the finals. The officials of the track always fine-toothed combed the Hudson.

They legislated against it by various means over the ensuing weeks. One competitor complained that we had an unfair advantage because both rear quarter panels flew out to the side creating an "airfoil."

We had to tack weld what was left of the quarter panels to the frame. The next week we were not allowed to run because there was virtually no floor in the car. You could look down at the pavement beneath you feet. This was solved with sheet metal and more welding. The coffee can cooling the fuel was protested, but there was no NHRA rule against it at the time.

The Hudson ran eight times that summer. It never "won" but finished a strong Top Five every week. The cracked head finally caused its demise while driving home from the track one Sunday; it eventually joined its friends in Pantileo's junkyard.

Every time I see a Hudson to this day, I am compelled to tell this story to the owner, who just nods his head in agreement and sings the praises of the Mighty Hudson!

SUZUKI'S SX is a concept for a 'sports crossover,' with sports sedan performance and room to haul your sports gear.

Spare Parts

SUZUKI CONCEPT: Suzuki has unveiled one of the most dramatic concept vehicles it has ever created.

The car's name, SX, stands for "Sport Crossover," so-called because the Suzuki combines thrilling sport sedan performance with SUV cargo-toting convenience.

Equipped with a 220-horsepower, all-wheel drive, the SX concept was built for two things: hauling down the road and hauling the gear of an adventure-seeking weekend warrior. Aimed at young sports-minded individualists who don't desire either sedans or SUVs, the high-performance SX provides its drivers with a great driving experience while en route to rock-climbing, mountain-bike trials or motorcross track.

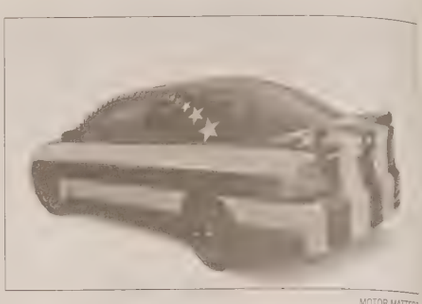

ASE: Years ago, the shade-tree mechanic could qualify to make repairs and adjustments on the family car.

But with the computerized vehicles of today, repairs require well-equipped expert technicians.

Those who are certified can be recognized by the ASE emblem displayed both as signs and shoulder insignia.

Today, there are almost a quarter of a million ASE technicians available.

SMASH HITS: Although the theater and the automobile are two different vehicles that attract public attention, the Lexus SC430 has a lot in common with the new Broadway musical "The Performers."

MOTOR MATTERS

HONDA CIVIC on tour with Everclear and blink-182.

Both are sold out through March 2002.

CONCERT TOURING CIVIC: Two of today's biggest rock bands are hitting the road this summer on the 2001 Civic Tour, which is American Honda's latest venture into the music area. The Civic Tour will feature both blink-182 and Everclear, two popular bands with young adults, on separate nationwide tours. The bands have each custom-designed a 2001 Civic Coupe which will tour the country with them.

The band Everclear, with hits such as "Santa Monica," "AM Radio," and "Wonderful," designed a black-and-orange Civic accented by stars along the roofline.

NATION'S WORST DRIVERS: The third annual consumer safe-driving survey, commissioned by TheSteelAlliance, gives Boston an "F" — labeling it the most unsafe of all cities surveyed.

Sixty-six percent of Bostonians, versus 37 percent nationally, rate their city as an unsafe place to drive.

Bostonians felt their fellow drivers were more rude than drivers in other cities and were more likely than their national counterparts to make rude gestures (13 percent vs. 9 percent), drive over the speed limit (70 percent vs. 55 percent) and talk on the cell phone (46 percent vs. 39 percent)

WHAT'S THAT NOISE?: A noise from the transmission when in Park or Neutral could be a damaged hydraulic pump in the transmission or torque converter.

GM'S HUMMER H2 SUT is smaller than the military model so you can fit it in the garage.

Hummer H2 SUT hard-body flexes its muscles

TIM SPELL
Truck Talk

NEW YORK — At a recent automotive press day, General Motors flaunted a more impressive display of rippled physiques than Muscle Beach does on a good day. Pumping up the macho was movie action hero Arnold Schwarzenegger, appropriately paired on stage with the Hummer H2 SUT concept. "Look at those deltoids; look at those calves," Schwarzenegger said of the H2 SUT.

General Motors, which acquired Hummer in late 1999, is eyeing the H2 SUT concept — like it did the set-for-production H2 SUV it follows — as a future addition to the lineup. It's a powerful message the Hummer brand is expanding far beyond the military-bred H1. These totally restyled and re-engineered 4x4 Hummers blend the expected beast with civility and style never before associated with the Hummer nameplate.

The partnership of Schwarzenegger with the Hummer brand is like no other celebrity/manufacturer relationship. The muscle man is a legitimate player in a game that paid off with the actualization of the Hummer product line. While filming "Kindergarten Cop" about a decade ago, Schwarzenegger saw a fleet of military HMMWV/Humvee vehicles rolling down the street. He had to have one. Since the Humvee was a military-only vehicle, Schwarzenegger initiated talks with the manufacturer, AM General Corp., and the U.S. Army. Those discussions resulted in the civilian Hummer.

The H2 SUV will go on sale the second quarter of 2002, and the H2 SUT — pending approval — will land in dealerships about a year later, said Michael DiGiovanni, Hummer marketing manager. Both will be priced in the high $40,000s.

The H2 SUV and H2 SUT are platform twins but have very different personalities, DiGiovanni said. The SUV is better suited for a family because it seats up to six passengers. The five-seater SUT was created to appeal to people who want a specialty image vehicle that's different from anything else. Basically the SUV is a square-back sport utility vehicle, and the SUT is a sport utility truck with an open cargo box.

In normal form, the SUT's bed is a mere 3-footer, but the load floor can expand to 7 feet. The method used to lengthen the cargo floor is similar to that found in Chevy's 2002 Avalanche. It has an adjustable bulkhead (or midgate) at the cab's rear. The rear seat folds and the midgate folds forward. Drop the tailgate, and a durable, ribbed, flat surface is created that can handle heavy-duty needs.

The body shares a character with the H1 that inspired it, but sheet metal has evolved from a garage-door look to one more like a quality major appliance. Far removed from military camoflage, the SUT's slicker body will flash like a neon sign with bright colors such as burnt orange and yellow. H2 isn't gargantuan like the H1, but mimics it with short front and rear overhangs, and a width that exceeds its height. Its 188.3-inch length is 10.6 inches less than that of a Chevy Tahoe, making it an easy garage fit.

Maintaining the military design flavor, H2 SUT's clamshell hood is forward-hinged and secured at the fender sides with large, utilitarian-look latches. In lieu of hooks, placed on Humvees for heilcopter hoisting, a large pair of grab handles protrudes from the hood. These brushed-metal grips provide the means to pull open the large hood.

Under the cowling sits a 6.0-liter Vortec V-8 engine. It moves the 5,725-pound SUT with 325 horsepower and 370 foot-pounds of torque. The transmission mate is a heavy-duty five-speed automatic. Full-time all-wheel-drive traction is sent to 17-inch cast-aluminum wheels with enormous 315/70R-17 tires. These are 35-inch-tall tires, a shade smaller than the H1's 37-inchers. Big tires contribute to the SUT's tall ground clearance of about 10 inches. The suspension isn't freight-train heavy duty like the H1's, but it is formidable enough for serious off-road conditions.

Hummer's focus on overbuilding and extreme design also is evident on the inside. The dashboard has an industrial-grade, chiseled look with brushed metal accents and oversized air vents. The shifter is imposing — a design DiGiovanni likens to a 747 jet control. SUT's interior is much roomier than the H1's four-passenger cabin. Its leather-covered front seats offer greater travel to provide more leg-stretching room for taller passengers.

An open-air experience is provided by powering open six windows — the four sides, rear and "largest skyroof in GM's history." A straight-on night-vision camera mounted within its brushed-metal grille is likely.

Versatili-tea

BY ERIC TUROWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Apparently, you can do almost anything with tea; make a hot or cold beverage, cook with it, dedorize a room, tenderize meat, use it as first aid or a furniture polish or a dye. Within the leaves of this plant, often thought of as a simple breakfast beverage, lurks thousands of years of history and tradition from Eastern and Western culture alike. Both in China and Japan, the word for tea is cha.

Tea is consumed ceremonially by cultures around the globe, from the famous Japanese Tea Ceremony to "high" and "low" tea times practiced by the Brittish.

A cha story

I remember my first real introduction to cha at my friend Ed's house while we were in college. His house was a typical example of Chinese domesticity (and this is only a guess made by comparison to my other Chinese friends' houses — they could well all be wacky). To my western mind-set, there is something fascinating about Asian tools. While performing essentially the same jobs as the everyday tools in my kitchen drawers, they look exotic. Sure, scissors cut and knives chop. Yet there seems to be an additional, specific functionality to ordinary Chinese tools.

In one of these odd-looking (though completely logical in function) tools — a pot-like device — brewed something called Yin Hao jasmine tea. I learned two things that day. One: all tea has caffeine in it, and boy did I feel it. "This is nothing. You should try the black tea my dad likes," said Ed. Two: I am allergic to jasmine. And boy did I feel it. Cha cha cha.

What is tea?

There is a current notion that tea drinking may decrease your chances of getting cancer, as cultures steeped in tea have fewer instances of the disease. So what, exactly, is tea?

Hundreds of different herbs are brewed in water and called "herbal tea." This is a misnomer. Herbs brewed in water are better referred to as tisane (which is French for herbs brewed in water), or as an herbal infusion. Real tea is from a plant, either Camelia sinensis or Thea sinensis, which grows mainly in Asia (thus all the cliches). As the plant is a member of the camelia family, you can grow your own tea plant in the garden. The best varieties, however, grow in the East.

Tea comes in three basic varieties — oolong, black and green. Better varieties are hand-picked and -processed. Once the tea is picked, it is laid out in the shade to wither so that it can be rolled. Rolled tea begins to oxidize, and is then heated to stop the oxidation process. Green tea does not undergo the oxidation process.

Cooking with tea

Here is a recipe for smoking a chicken. There is no need for a large, expensive outdoor smoker. With tea, you can do it right on the stovetop.

Tea Smoked Chicken
Prep Time: 8 hours 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 1 hours 30 minutes
3 pound whole chicken
1 teaspoon ground Szechwan peppercorn
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon fivespice powder
Smoking Mixture:
1/2 cup black tea leaves
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup raw rice

BOB LARSON/STAFF

THERE ARE MORE THINGS TO DO WITH TEA than most people are probably aware of. Tea is a big part of culture all over the world, from Japanese and Chinese tea ceremonies to the high tea of Britain

More than for just sipping

BY RUTH FANTASIA
ALBANY TIMES UNION

Some people will use tea bags for anything. Here are a few fun uses for black tea we found on the World Wide Web at chefnoah.com/teabags.htm.

■ Deodorize your feet: Boil three or four tea bags in one quart of water for 10 minutes. Add enough cold water to make a comfortable soak. Soak your feet 20 to 30 minutes, then dry and apply foot powder. Do this twice a day until odor is under control. Then continue twice a week.

■ Highlight brown hair: Rinse red or brown hair with brewed black tea for golden highlights.

■ Relieve sunburn pain: Pat your sunburn with wet tea bags.

■ Soothe tired eyes: Place tea bags soaked in cool water over your eyes for at least 15 minutes.

■ Fix a broken fingernail: Cut a piece of gauze paper from a tea bag to fit the nail, coat with clear nail polish and press gently against the break. Then cover with colored nail polish.

■ Dye graying white fabrics: If bleach won't whiten a graying white garment, soak the item in hot, strong brewed tea until it is a shade darker than you desire. Then rinse in cold water and let dry.

■ Accelerate the germination of grass seeds: Mix two tablespoons of cold, strong brewed tea into each pound of seed, cover and place in the refrigerator for five days. Before sowing, spread the seed to dry for a day or two on newspapers on the garage or basement floor.

■ Deodorize stuffy rooms: Mix one quart brewed tea and four tablespoons lemon juice, strain through a coffee filter, and store in empty spray bottles.

■ Invigorate house plants: Water ferns and other houseplants once a week with a weak, tepid brewed tea.

■ Polish black lacquer: Wash black lacquer pieces with strong brewed tea, then wipe dry with a soft cloth.

■ Tenderize meat: Add equal parts strong brewed tea and double-strength beef stock to a tough pot roast or stew. The tannin in tea is a natural meat tenderizer.

Iced tea without gourmet prices

BY RUTH FANTASIA
ALBANY TIMES UNION

A buck to a buck fifty for 20-ounces of tea? Whoa, tea is mostly water.

If you think the convenience of being able to open a bottle is worth the price, consider these numbers:

A 100-count box of regular-size tea bags will yield 75 (20-ounce) servings of tea. Even if you include the cost of the 12 gallons of water you'll use to brew the tea, those 75 servings will cost less than $6; 75 (20-ounce) bottles of prepared tea will cost you between $65 and $112.50, depending on the brand and where you buy them.

One reason people are willing to part with so much money for bottled teas is because of the exotic herbs such as ginseng, and the interesting flavors. But you can create those flavors at home by adding fruit juice. Go ahead and experiment, tasting as you go, to find the right combination. As for the herbs, ginseng root is available at most area health food stores.

When making iced tea, follow the same rules as you do for making hot tea:

■ Always use fresh water.

■ If using black tea, bring the water to a boil. For green tea, heat the water until steaming only.

■ Pour the hot water over the tea bags; I use four regular-sized

Tea

2 to 3 chunks fresh ginger
2 to 3 large strips of orange zest
2 tablespoons sesame oil
Scallion brushes

Wash the chicken and pat dry inside and out with paper towels. Combine Szechwan peppercorns, salt, and fivespice powder in a small bowl. Rub the seasonings into the outside and inside cavity of the bird. Place the chicken in a large bowl, cover, and refrigerate 8 hours or overnight.

Fill the lower part of a steamer with enough water to come within an inch of the cooking rack. Bring the water to a rolling boil, place the chicken on the rack, and cover the steamer. Steam the chicken for 45 minutes, keeping the water at a boil and replenishing it as it boils away.

Line a large wok or a heavy Dutch oven with tightfitting lid with heavyduty aluminum foil.

Combine the smoking mixture ingredients and spread over the foil in the bottom of the pot. Turn the heat under the pot to high and place a rack about 3 inches above the smoking mixture so that the chicken does not touch it. Place the chicken on the rack, breast side up. Line the inside of the lid with more foil, leaving an excess of 3 inches around the lid. Cover the pot tightly and crimp the foil down so the lid fits securely and smoke doesn't escape.

After you detect smoke, smoke the chicken for 20 to 25 minutes. Turn off the heat and let the smoke subside, about 5 minutes. The chicken should be a rich, golden brown on the outside.

Lift out the smoked chicken and transfer to a cutting board. Immediately brush the sesame oil lightly over the outside. Allow chicken to cool, about 10 minutes. To serve, cut off the wings and legs. Divide the body of the chicken in half lengthwise by cutting through the breast and backbone. Lay the halves flat on the cutting board, skinside up, and use a cleaver to chop through each half, bones and all, into 3 to 4 equal pieces. Chop the wings and legs into pieces as well. Arrange the chicken pieces on a large platter, and garnish with the scallion brushes.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings

Brewing

Connoisseurs of fine tea scoff at tea bags. It is the job of the connoisseur to scoff. If you like tea, and you like the convenience of a bag, go for it. If you really like tea, there are a few compelling reasons why you might want to step into the world of fancier teas, which generally don't come in handy bags. In fact, handiness seems to be a big detraction from properly brewed tea.

Infusion is the process where tea leaves unroll from their oxidized little crumb state into a full-blown, hearty drink. This unfolding is hindered with leaves captive in a bag. A tea ball (also convenient for clean up) still keeps the scrunched up leaves scrunched. Strainers or basket filters are a better way to go. Some tea pots come with special ceramic basket filters.

Loose leaves infuse best, plus you then have the benefit of the time-honored option to read the tea leaves in your cup. This will be closely followed by the task of cleaning damp, clingy leaves out of cups and teapot. But for infusion, nothing beats letting the leaves float freely in water.

Before infusion begins, you want to heat up your teapot with hot water. When the pot is hot, the infusion time is longer because it takes more time for the water to cool than in a cold pot.

For black and oolong teas, water should be boiling before being poured over your preferred infusion technique. Green teas prefer you let the water cool off a bit before the dunking. Steeping generally takes three to five minutes. Longer than that, and you get that yucky, astringent flavor. Oolong can steep as long as four to six mintues, darjeeling only from 90 seconds to three minutes. Check with your local fine tea shop, or the Internet, for the proper steeping times of favorite teas.

If you're an "adder," black tea should be your brew of choice. Oolong and green tea are meant to be enjoyed straight. Milk works better than cream or half and half. Lemon and honey go well together, though not so well with milk. Lemon will make milk curdle a bit.

Something about tea

No matter what I bring up to the counter in the cafeteria, Kathy the cashier always charges me for the price of a large cup of coffee. And 99 percent of the time she's right. Coffee is a beverage that goes without thinking.

Tea is a cup of memories. Hot, sweet tea in the morning before bundling up and racing through the snow to a big yellow school bus; countless three-in-the-mornings at disreputable after-hours Chinese restaurants; kitchen discussions about replacing the deck or the plumbing or the fixtures with my housie (think "roomie," but in a larger structure) all come up when thinking, or drinking, tea.

Is there something in tea that inspires such memories? Is there something about tea that makes the human animal more civilized? These are mysteries for a different section of the paper.

bags to make a 2-quart pitcher, in a heat-proof pitcher or teapot. Allow to steep about 15 minutes.

■ Pour cold water into a 2-quart serving pitcher until it is a third full. Add the steeped tea. Add sugar or honey, if using. Stir until dissolved. Fill the pitcher with cold water.

Green Tea with Honey

Cold water
4 green tea bags
1/2 cup honey or to taste
2 (1/2-inch) pieces ginseng root

Fill kettle with cold water and heat over high until steaming but not boiling. Place tea bags and ginseng root, if using, in a heat-proof pitcher or teapot. Steep 15 minutes, remove and discard tea bags and ginseng. Stir in honey.

Taste. If tea is too strong, dilute gradually with cold water until you have the desired flavor.

Ice Berry Spice Tea

3 tea bags
3 cups boiling water
1/3 cup sugar
3 cinnamon sticks
15 whole cloves
1 1/2 cups cranberry juice
3 lemon slices

Pour boiling water over tea bags. Steep for 5 minutes and strain; discard bags. Add sugar, cinnamon sticks and cloves. Cover and let stand until cool. Strain again and add juice. Serve over ice.

Sun may not be best tea brewing method

ALBANY TIMES UNION

Using the sun's rays to make tea is popular but, since the method can encourage the growth of a bacteria called Alcaligenes viscolactis, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention discourages the practice.

The bacteria is commonly found in water and while the caffeine in black tea will help prevent its growth for a few hours, the effect won't last all day. Instead of brewing tea in the sun, the CDC and the National Tea Association recommend you use water that has been heated to at least 190 degrees. If you can't boil water, you may steep the tea in the refrigerator overnight where the cold temperatures will prohibit bacteria growth.

For the same reasons, make only as much tea as you'll drink in a day and store brewed tea in the refrigerator. If the tea develops a thick or syrupy appearance, discard it.

Be kind to the environment: please recycle this newspaper.

*APR is Annual Percentage Rate. All loans are subject to credit approval and all terms and conditions apply. Regular rates are subject to METRO 1's Custom Loan Rate Policy. The custom level rate for each individual loan will be assigned at the time the loan is underwritten based on the member's credit worthiness. Rates, terms and down payments are based on credit worthiness and are subject to change. Excludes the refinance of existing loan. Loan requests are not required to spin wheel. In most cases, interest rate/rate reduction will be spun for at the time of loan disbursement. Loans must be funded by June 30, 2001, to receive interest rate or rate reduction. If funded after June 30, 2001, current interest rates and rate reductions will apply. Loans processed through the CUSA system are excluded. ODDS PER SPIN: 0% interest rate equals 1 in 40. 3.00% interest rate discount equals 1 in 40. Regular interest rate equals 20 in 40.
